That's how you know something is irrelevant. And I say that as a Twitter-using leftist.

I actually remember you mentioning us on Twitter once.

More accurately, a medieval fiefdom which ceased to exist centuries ago, which our man here insists has a distinct culture which he refuses to elaborate on. Their claims to fame are some larpers and a small time Twitter account

I'm not exactly nearing the people sing on the matter. Cornish separatists are less pathetic than this, at least they have a distinct language and some cultural facets, what do you have other than some vague allusions to popular support.

Is there a Northumbrian language?
Do communities of real life people identify as Northumbrian?

Come to think of it - I don't think I haven't seen a shitty DemSoc/LibSoc nation other than a WIP nation I haven't even completed yet (or nations clearly made by people who get their information of what socialism is from Fox News). There was technically that one time where a bunch of hippies moved to the mountain, but it was a Totalitarian State LARPing as a commune.

I'm not saying that a friendly SocDem state has to be written like a post-apocalyptic shithole, but it would be interesting to see people's interpretations of what happens when ideologies go horribly wrong.

A lot of people do, and a lot of interesting research has been done recently on the Northumbrian language. It's as real a language as Cornish, actually, if you didn't know.

People making social media thread ban lists that look IC but are in fact OOC and then act as though it was obvious you were banned OOCly. I hear this one is pretty common, it happened to someone I know intimately recently.

Northumbrian independence is a niche issue in the UK as it is. Why do you expect Americans, Canadians, Australians and people that aren't even in Anglosphere countries to care, let alone know what Northumbria is?

a South Park based on Chepurin and Sorokin would be based

I'd make comics based on that but i'm lazy if i say so myself

Okay, now onto my cliché for the day: Leader pictures made in piccrew or taken out of some flash visual novel. I've seen this trope in use heavily and while some people do well on it (E.G: Khoronzon or whatever with Emperor Narcissus) because after they do the picture they embellish it further via photo editing, others just leave the picture as is without even taking out the background or even the link to the flash game website. I always go somewhere along the lines of: Bro what in the bloody hell of cringe is this.

I'm somewhat guilty of this trope as well, with my either The Sims or FIFA generated characters. But at least I go through the trouble of making it up with consistent writing, characterization, and editing the damn pictures to take the background out if where they stand don't make sense.
