The entire justice system screams in confusion because free speech, but also hate speech laws...

Anyway, you have to listen to the screams.

lol jk

No punishment, unless you were doing something otherwise illegal.

Since the AN didn't leave me a crime... I'll respond to the AAN crime.

Nothing, nothing at all. It's not any kind of crime.

The fact that this song is used by bigots and radicals does not criminalize it. The song's original lyrics only seem to portray a patriotic feeling for the Serbs who were targets of invasions and war crimes. At Merulla, we judge people by their actions and not symbols

Not a crime, but some corrupt Magistrates might take matter into their own hands, probably violently cracking down on the riot and arresting them for "resisting arrest."

Resisting arrest?

Depending on whether the organization is a designated terrorist organization then capital punishment. However, if one joins paramilitary organizations in the defense of the Republic of Zaranistan, (eg. the Zarani Huriya Brigades) then they would probably get praise and government funding.

This would fall into the category of murder, specifically, assisted suicide. If the widow was willing, the accused person would get a life sentence in prison. If they were forced to do this, the accused would be sentenced to a death sentence.

Hard labor via government mandate, getting sold to slavery, sentenced to Senscarians eating you alive, or sent to the front lines. Depends on what the official says (for egging the house, got ninja'd ☐)

For running a scam? Seizure of all possessions (if you had any), and same sentences listed above, depends on what the Judge says though.

Again it depends, If you are a female spider, you have the right to kill your husband. And dragonflies may be chosen to eat prisoners, killing them.

But if you are not a female spider or a dragonfly, murder would get you killed, so death penalty.

Assisting suicide?

Large fine

A train is traveling down a track. 5 people have been tied to this first track (for whatever reason). A nearby railway operator, unable to stop the train due to how fast it's going, sees this, and redirects the train to a second track with only 1 person tied to it. The train continues going down this second track, resulting in the death of the person tied to the track from being ran over. The operator redirected the train, which caused the person on the second track to die, but he did it so the 5 on the first track wouldn't. Is he punished for the death, and if so, what is his punishment?

He is required to pay for funeral if the family of that person requests so; but he saved the lives of five people. The judge would likely give him no punishment; except to pay for the funeral, if the family of the person requests so.

Techically, the operator would be guilty of vehicular manslaughtering the one person. However, discretion would prevent the case from getting that far.

Probably a life sentence due to the sheer scale of the hat-stealing and plane hijacking.
