Issues assuming that if you have the Socialism policy, you are incredibly corrupt and incompetent as a leader (seriously I got an issue about state mismanagement due to corruption, bad enough that there were food shortages throughout my nation, despite my incredibly low corruption stat as well as high economic/quality of life indicators and a strong agriculture sector).

The North Sea Realm, colloquially known as Northaria, established 1421 A.D. A British-Nordic nation with strong democratic traditions and an elective monarchy.

We use NS stats, with the exception of tax rates and the related stats. The Northarian population is an estimated 75.7 million.

I reject anything and everything political that I posted on here prior to 2019. She/her, please.

Yeah, I got that "food shortages throughout my nation" issue pretty early on. From there I changed from corrupt dictatorship to democratic socialist before people started voting literal downs in and I had to put a stop to that. I think they think every socialist nation is some revisionist Gorby state tinkering on a societal collapse. But then again they make everything into a absurdity with this game. Stale jokes galore.

I've noticed this as well. I too am not a monarchy and my leader is 51 years old with two children that are 30 and 26 respectively. I also feel strangely uncomfortable about RPing any character under the age of 18, probably because I don't really know how a young kid is supposed to act and would just fall back to some dumb stereotype of a 12 year old with a Fortnite addiction.

I wonder if Alastair's son is addicted to Fortnite, now that you mention it.

I hate RPing as a character in general, and so I automatically revile the idea as roleplaying a child since it would be insufferable and I already hate the majority of kids in real life so I have no clue why I would want to roleplay their asinine behaviour on the funny nation game either. Besides that fact, I haven't taken part in any forum RPs in my entire time on the site and until I genuinely feel like my nation is well written enough to partake in one, then I'd rather sit in my corner and worldbuild or go on F7.

Anyone else get viscerally uncomfortable when a player in a char RP is obviously attempting to force some sort of sex or romance with your character, often for horny purposes?

Oh hey, me! Well, though to be fair... it's not exactly that uncomfortable because I know it's satire.

Valentine Z wrote:

- Pretty, and capable of growing to enormous sizes. Holly is my dream girl, I've finally found the waifu for me.
- I rate her 10/10, absolute best waifu. I don't even care about the cold, her personality and ability to grow in size outweigh the whole freezing thing.

• Ah, Holly is so perfect. I definitely don't want her to go and hide forever, maybe I could send her some gifts to show her how much I love her and want to be with her. The Mountain Dew thing probably won't work, so I'll have to give it some serious thought.

An actual super awkward thing happened in Ram's Head Saloon 3, and... yeah, less said, the better.

I mean tbf it's a bit hard to separate creepy homyposting from actual plot advancement in RP, but I agree when it's blatantly obvious it should definitely be smacked

Well it is, but it has to be reported before a mod even notices, and then taken action against before it stops.

CSS used to do that sort of thing. Like randomly in a war RP have the soldiers go visit a brothel, then RP the girls flirting and all... bleh.

See a brothel, crack a planet.

My reasoning? All's fair in love and war. So therefore it is fair when I split a planet because someone wanted some "love".

That all depends how graphic of detail they go into. Having a character attempting to hit on another character wouldn't be violation of PG-13. If they're doing detailed depictions of sexual activity then that's a violation of PG-13.

This is partially why many of my characters, particularly royals, are either married or engaged. I don't want to deal with creepy homyposters, specifically the type that spams royal marriage TGs and such.
