The Northern US Federation controls a population of fifty million people under it's belt. Despite it's extreme stratification and humiliation of having only 10% of it's former territories. Despite all these problems they somehow manage to fund grandiose projects such as underwater cities, tourist spaceflight, and... holographic singing software? It seems their only second to the Mexican Empire in terms of instabiity, theyll likely explode under the weight of their sheer ambitions considering the author's irl beliefs.

One superweapon in possession of the Caleshan is the Stargun, which stores and fires a coherent pulse of fusion reactor exhaust strong enough to blow a six-meters wide hole inside a medium-sized mountain in one shot and that pretty much can hit anything in its line of sight, though it might lose some efficacy outside of atmosphere.

Zoroastrianism is doing quite well in their world, as is the Iranian Empire, which is always nice to see. (BTW the Iranian endonym for Zoroastrianism is Mazdayasna if you want to use that.)

I'm curious if people can spot all the references in my timeline factbook.

I get the impression that the people of Airceltria are getting a fairly raw deal out of this, given that the state gives priority to local companies even if foreign companies are producing superior goods.

That could be the case but the economic model they have was made more to make everyone feel productive and fulfill then making a ton of money and most are afraid that allowing foreign companies to come in would cause those who are super chains to destroy local business, putting people out of both a job and livelihood.

Alexandria Ashwood's most uncomfortable set of personal decisions revolve around abortion laws; she individually doesn't like it too much and would prefer to see the future offspring live but makes exceptions in the case of medical emergencies that endanger the mother and hereditary birth defects...also they really like wine. A lot. They have a cellar of it.

It is hammered to the reader constantly that the person picked as Air Domain's representative, Nova. Is a devoted yet mundane individual. She dislikes not being able to do anything and giddy... for the lack of a better term around young men. Apparently, there was supposed to be rations to neutralize such odd unproductive feelings. But, it seems this resurgence seems to indicate that she ran out of it.

Director An Shen is a PLA man who rose up the ranks and eventually joined the Central Investigative Department in 1968, assigned to the Extraterrestrial Affairs Bureau, a department he'd control by 1976. However, it's questionable how many of his past records are real and how many are disinformation by part of the CID.

AN: King Eadgar IV expressed interest in joining the Navy, unlike his old man. Maybe because Eadgar likes to travel and he's bad at finance and administration. He apparently joined at a time of great naval expansion, when 4 new carriers and 10 new "forwasters" (sorry, I don't know what that could be) were finished in a 9 year period.

That Waisnor made its Eurovision debut in 1995. Though they have yet to win the competition, they did manage to take 2nd place back in 2011.

Most of the energy produced by Zohiana comes from nuclear powerplants. One of the main reasons for being a nuclear power-fueled nation is because of how clean and efficient the energy is, especially after technological breakthroughs to allow the waste to be recycled. Fossil fuels are still used, but only really used for cars and other vehicles that aren't rails, aircraft, and ships.

Okay, so looking at what information is currently available to me as of now, the center focus, the titular Red Mother, is what happens when The Mother and her Other, Memory decide to fuse together. The resulting transformation allows the Red Mother to take the fight to the forces of Suffering by using the powers of manifestation. That, and Suffering, as a concept and a name, is one of the biggest enemies to face the Red Mother and her daughters, being born out of an egg that only spread further and further throughout the world before becoming... this.

(Low Quality, sorry but) While the United Kingdom controls not just the British Isles but also Brittany, its flag does not seem to include that (not incorporating the cross version of their flag), which makes me think Brittany is less "incorporated" into the Union and more occupied in the same way Ireland was by Great Britain during the 18th century.
