Hróðvitnir's mood: Critical Norse Furry

"Hmph, serves them damn right that manipulating the weather is not going to turn out well on their behalf. Besides manipulating the weather, I have never heard of Mercer before until now; he doesn't come off as any different from the other guy, his dad, and still acts like him from what I've heard from other people. Huh, that reminds me of Odin and his idiot sons and grandsons in a way, and I suppose applying the saying 'apples don't fall far from the tree' can be applied to this Chancellor too. And again, going back to the weather manipulation thing which froze over the planet's northern hemisphere, I can say without a doubt that the fault still falls on him since his dad's the one who appointed a scientist to interfere with the weather instead of leaving it be."

-Chief Alpha of Vargrheimr, Hróðvitnir

"What an adorable creature! One that's suffered his fair share of pain and suffering through his life and yet has somehow managed to keep the spark in his soul powerful and vibrant. I know you seem to be a dear friend of Ambrosia's but I must be brash, you are not the type to lead. You're more of a mascot to your nation. The personification of reckless courage and overwhelming cheerfulness that it's almost intoxicating. Of course, do not let me sap your energy. I'm merely stating my opinion. You're a breath of fresh air, compared to the many sadistic authority figures that dot the universe. I apologize if I come off as a dispiriting being. I simply cannot be as cheerful as you, considering the suffering and evil I've witnessed in my lifetime." - Alarielle

"Huh, so we've got another version of Valentine and we're calling her Valentina? I've got to be honest, I'd rather not think about my doppelganger because come on now, no one can copy me. The universe can't copy me and clearly, you two aren't the same or maybe you two are just very awkward around each other. Who knows? Regardless, I know I'll come off as an asshole but is there anything really distinct about you two? No offense and all that, you're both good people and Valentina's a rather tragic soul, considering...you know, her planet got glassed into oblivion? I'm not going to even think about how you entered Valentijn's home planet but you know what? I'm glad you two are together. Maybe you two can check each other's power levels and hope that one or the other doesn't go insane. Just, for the love of all that is holy, don't turn into evil twins or I'm going to whoop your asses if you come anywhere close to my home world." - Vishala

"Interesting! Gwen somehow managed to find out who her creator god is? A writer? I'm rather shocked to say the least and honestly, I'd say that's extremely reckless coming from you but you somehow managed to shrug off that feeling of dread? What kind of being are you? You're no human and to think that you've maintained your chirpy, happy nature despite all these years. It's simply not possible and my dear Ambrosia is friends with you? She definitely has friends in high places...very high places. You know, I wonder if you wonder what your actions might've done to the universe because let me tell you, you might not have noticed it but creation is infinite and every small action you take will reverberate across the cosmos. When you throw a pebble in water, do you not see a ripple form? If you truly worry about the lives of others, you would cease this tomfoolery. Rewrite history to your liking? The more you change the universe, the more it fights back! Heavens, I'm going to make myself a cup of coffee." - Henrietta

"Most interesssting! A husk of metal that thinks it lives and breathes like a normal organic being. No no, you are an abomination. Do not think otherwise. You are but a mimicry of humanity and a poor one at that. In fact, humans are some of the most iconoclastic beings in the universe. To copy a human, you must display a plethora of emotions and yet you still act like an infant. Intriguing creature! I share no love for the poor parodies of humanity that humans can create. Your mortal creator should be ashamed of you and himself." Hozqa-Tli

"Unlike my cold-blooded friend here, I see no issue with artificial intelligence or A.I. If you display any form of sentience, you're a sentient being, technically speaking. You don't have to be born in a conventional, biological way.

You know what? I pity you, Adriana. At the end of the day, you live in the shadow of a much more recognizable and bubblier being, similarly to how everyone sees me as the meek version of Ambrosia. You were born for war and yet you are a bubbly, cheerful little thing. Does war allow for cheerfulness? No and yet you've been programmed to be as happy as your big sister! My dear, you are lost potential. You do not have to be a clone of your dear Clarissa. You can be so much more!" - Victoria

"Oh, holy fuck, why does your chin look like as sharp? Staunch Traditionalist? 'Permit' same-sex marriages? Listen here, Edward Cunningham. You really think I'm going to give a crap about your theological teachings? Go get a real degree that'd benefit your people. What happens when you cross anime powers and overpowered leaders with furries, all written by a bored Homestuck fan with too much time? Well, you get Rumei. A multiethnic, FT republic with both might and magic that let it conquer the entire Orion Arm.

A 7.6 (this is probably outdated but I can't do the calculations rn) (Tier 9, Level 6, Type 9) according to this index.

Come to The Orion, we got CULTURE and FURRIES

Show Recommendation: Cobra Kai. It is very, very good.

IC Name: Roman Republic, or simply Rome (Rumei). Occasionally called the Ignisian Republic. Current year is 2697.

"I am sure she is a nice... whatever she is. However, due to her in-humanity, I must insist that non of her citizens be allowed to enter mine, nor mine into her nation. That may sound cruel, but we are different creatures, us humans are white, brown, yellow, and dark-brown, but we are still humans; Your people however, are not human. It was to humanity the stewardship of the earth was given, not these animal creatures. I mean no malice in these rather rude statements, truly. However God must come first, and humanity second to me and my nation, all other creatures are tertiary at best. Forgive my position, it is simply that your people do not matter to me, we shall treat you fair and trade freely, however, your people are not permitted within my nation with any permanence, market reasons are potentially open however. may God bless you creatures as we are your stewards." - James V of Antioch

I disagree with James that God comes first. It has personally showed me, that even when you put your fairy tail entity first. You will get nothing from it. Only death in the end, as everything you know is erased by a malevolent beast. As you beg for help but nothing answers. That can be taken as only a opinion but it's the truth. You will be saved by nobody, and have to rely on yourself. If you want to greater your chances at survival, when the inevitable comes as not many will be bestowed with such luck as me to restore their people back to prominence. Otherwise, I am neutral regarding James of Antitoch.

"I'm going to be real with you. I don't know what's happening, but too many people here have depressive backgrounds that make me feel like I'm in my teenage years reading yuri fanfiction I regret those years. Either way, this man is the representation with what happens when you give clearly mentally unfit people a position of power. In Mr. Vanderbilt's case, it is what happens when natural selection misses an individual and allows him to live while the rest of his species is killed off by this 'malevolent entity'. Is it a shame? Of course! Do I feel bad for him? Yes, but it is clear that this event made him into a sociopathic monster. I don't judge him, it would make me a sociopathic monster too."

"What I want to say is that this individual is clearly not mentally fit to be a leader. He is a coward, his family tried to save itself while the rest of its countrymen were consumed by the 'malevolent entity'. This goes to show that he has no actual merit, that he has no actual wit. And no, cloning yourself and then making what is basically a cult of worship to make up for your lack of self-worth and suicidal thoughts are signs of a narcissist sociopath, not a leader."

"Great, another xeno. This time one that removed his nation's most important attributes, order and stability and plunged it into who knows how many wars of civil war. I'm sure he likely justified it by saying he fighting for rights or some other petty thing, but the crime of starting a civil war is unforgivable and brings nations to the brink of destruction. Shame the spirits he think exists couldn't have him begin the civil war as we launched an invasion though, it would make them fall even faster to us."

"Many aspects of his world and culture remain unclear to me, so he will have to forgive me if my opinion is incomplete. It would appear he was raised to be a man of faith, which I can respect, and apparently led a revolution against an unjust state. Based on what data I have seen so far, however, it seems that the government that replaced it suppresses the individuality and spirituality of its citizens as well, just in different ways. In addition, her particular brand of collectivism reminds me of the darker periods of the former USSR to our south, and her apparent encouragement of ritual violence is very concerning, spiritual or not. Overall I must say my opinion leans negative, though I must stress that I still have much more to learn about his world in general."

AN: "The Swarm Queen is a frightening figure. Though I cannot fault her for resenting the foreign species that attacked her people, her apparent dream of destroying all other species is alarming, as is her apparent disregard for individual life. She claims that all she does is for the good of her entire nation, but from what I have read so far it does not seem that this translates to a meaningful life for the individual. Though I cannot claim to fully understand the nature of her and her people, and I certainly cannot call her unintelligent, I must say that my opinion is quite negative."

~~"WTF Shiori based????!! Higgs!~~ Mister Shiori? You're an interesting fellow to say the least. A man of humble beginnings but zealously dedicated to his nation and people? I must say, consider me an admirer, even if I do not share the same upbringing as you have. Although if I must be honest for a second, these talks of your divinity is nothing but hogwash, I do hope that you've abandoned such ideals and if not, please do. You need an inflated mind, not ego. Then again, your rhetoric is rather inspiring to the masses. Do you believe in your own words or do you use your 'divinity' to your advantage or is it both?

*I know I shouldn't intervene in familial relationships, but you need to forgive a dear sibling. Forgive your own flesh and blood because no matter what, fate will always make your paths cross. AN: "The high priestess? I see no reason why I'd despise her. In fact, I admire her philanthropic nature. She seeks to promote peace and prosperity, shunning war as a tool but let me explain to you something rather quickly. War's going to come to your doorstep sooner or later because people are assholes. People will find a reason to hurt you so would you rather just sit aside and let them rape your homeland? No! Of course not I hope! You want to be ready for anyone that comes your way. You're an adorable lady with a heart of gold but you need to turn your hurt into an alloy. Gold to your people. Titanium to your foes. Regardless, I wish I was more like you, minus the spiritualism. I'm not too keen on religion or the gods. Waste of time in my opinion" - Ambrosia

"As a follower of Marx's great ideology myself, but also an atheist and staunch supporter of state secularism, and as a proponent of humanist values, I find Jim Jones to be a depraved mockery of what it means to be socialist, an embarrassment to everything the great Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels stood for. In my own timeline, Jim Jones committed suicide. Though it is not a route I fully support, I think it appears better than the alternative that a living Mr. Jones presents. Mr. Jones is not a national leader. Mr. Jones is a cult leader."

"Okay, you seriously have misconstrued what the RCAS is if you think that people there are 'oppressed'. In fact, I'm pissed off that you call me a tyrant. I am just the chief of the nation's military, a position that I was elected to. I reason I fill the 'leader' slot is because our nation has a collective executive. Then, you have the audacity to claim that my fellow Americans are somehow forced to live in terrible conditions. You do realize that you're talking about a direct democracy where every citizen owns their own means of production? If you mean minorities, then I sadly have to tell you that I solved the issue by deporting the majority of them.

Then, you have the audacity to promote an armed rebellion against the nation. Look, if people disagree with the RCAS's policies, they can change it at anytime. We have the policies that we have due to popular support. Yet, you come to proselytize to a people who had achieved their freedom through revolution, who have control over their means of production. More so in fact than in your state, which still relies on elected representatives. Just to sound even more pretentious, you then bring up often contradictory documents and writings.

Ahem, the Magna Carta simply was England's nobles restraining the king. Considering that we don't even have a single person as the executive, the document is effectively useless. The Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Citizen is pretty much obsolete considering that feudal nobility was never a thing in America. I find it funny that a devoted communist decided to bring up documents from bourgeois liberal democracies to start a 'proletarian revolution'. Seriously, half the documents literally come from the United Nations! As for the Constitution, I oppose it for centralizing government. For the Bill of Rights, it's already part of the 2nd Articles of Confederation. Marxist literature is also well known in the RCAS, and communist organizations are clearly allowed to be established. Party politics simply doesn't exist due to the lack of representative institutions due to the direct democracy. And, I doubt that some n—r's speech is going to be popular with the RCAS's citizenry.

Basically, you have some irrational hatred for my nation, and, despite what I agree with you on, I have no choice but to despise you. You're not a real revolutionary. In fact, you're the sort of retard who'd be a partisan of the 'Socialist Commonwealth', pretending that they abolished capitalism while it festers like a cancer in your nation. I have achieved a socialist revolution and succeeded in giving the working class their birth right, their manifest destiny. Meanwhile, you desperately try to make a pale imitation of the old Soviet Union. I made my people gods. Could the same be said about you? Also, your helmet is fucking stupid, faggot."

"Then you have thus not understood the reason I would be presenting the documents I have chosen - they share a feature of explaining basic human rights. Something you clearly do not understand. The selection was chosen widely among influential instruments in establishing human rights. That you have failed to gleam that commonality betrays your dismissive attitude towards human rights, towards the unalienable rights of metahumanity. Who they were drafted by does not change their value, does not change that I am widely versed in them, as any civilized leader of a metahuman nation should be.

I was unaware that you deport minorities; the revelation of this makes my opinion of you sink even lower. Yes, I do hate what you have done and the ideas you support. You are a white supremacist, thus you are an enemy of humanity itself. By deporting people for no reason by skin color and ethnicity, you are oppressing them. I suppose instead of sending rifles and documents to your nation, I should then send them to the people you have deported. You will see then the righteous anger of the oppressed.

No, I suppose I am not a revolutionary. I didn't have to fight to secede from the Russian Federation, for when I decided to found the New Soviet Union, the Russian Federation had already disbanded seventeen years prior. I was simply founding a nation in an anarchist void. You claim capitalism festers in my nation? Where would that even be? The nuclear war set everyone back to the same point - money of the old world was worthless, the means of production ceased to function entirely, and the previous state dissolved. Any major differences between classes mostly smoothed out over the following seventeen years. For once, most of metahumanity was on the same page. Yet that still was not enough to produce a society of true equals. So I have been working towards that. I choose to base this new society on the ideals and beliefs of the old Soviet Union, as it proved to me to be a better model of society than the corporate oligarchy that was the previous Russian Federation; a society guided by humanist values and the teachings of the enlightened Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels. You think it desperate, yet it is deliberate - the old Soviet Union united several nations of different histories and cultures under a single ideology and way forward, and while its efforts were flawed, it provides a conceptual backbone to work with and structure what I am trying to create - a union of panmetahumanity. We are struggling not because of flaws inherent in this system of government but because everything is going to be difficult when over ninety percent of the human population died, the environment has been catastrophically damaged in serious and irrevocable ways, and the means of production have been damaged and shut down. We are having to create society from scratch, with only the aid of whatever technology we can salvage.

And with that last word you have uttered, addressing me by such a slur, we have no more to discuss. I will not return the remark; for though my people scavenge through rubble and scrap metal, I am more civilized than the likes of you. Have a wonderful life, Mr. Pickett. Proshchay navsegda."
