A collective of vengeful barbarians in the far future waging war on a decadent futuristic settlement, under the leadership of a mysterious warlord.
In the meantime, an exiled logistician-turned-badass goes to desperate measures through the chaos to save the man she loves.

OFFICE OF THE PREMIER

Regarding Chancellor Lev Patémon.

I do have to commend Chancellor Patémon, he has and will continue to lead the NCA and his nation to and through greatness. His quick actions against the dangers of COVID-19 and declared support for the SAR present a confident and capable minister who puppets an active and responsive Government. I have full confidence that Patémon will be able to quickly adapt and overcome the growing changes of the modern world.

"James refuses to learn and adapt to the changing times, clinging to that ancient cult of his and enforcing its dogma across his entire country. He is a monarch- misbegotten, spoiled, and forever out-of-touch with his people and reality; raised believing the world revolved around him, that he should always get what he wants, and that his irrational emotionality is somehow acceptable in a head of state. James represents a failure of evolution. He is a caveman that refuses to leave the cave and bases his understanding of the world on the paintings on its walls."

"I must say that I find myself rather impressed by Chairman Kalrand. It is rare indeed that we encounter a foreign leader who expresses similar sentiments to our own. Of course, he isn't perfect, and his approach is somewhat cruder than I would like, but his ideological thought can indeed be considered proto-Maxwellist, an embryonic form of the ideology that drives our own success. I am curious to see how Tarkvald develops in the future, and what path Kalrand has prepared for it."
