I learned a lot about the Nortender language, especially it's wide variety of vowel sounds. I also learned that the Nortender word for no/not (at least in compound words) is nach.

Their nation means 'Golden Kingdom' in an ancient version of their language. I didn't see what 'Rhim' stands for though.

Maybe I'll spot that later.

Above ninja: They fought a war of harsh language against the United States, with insults sonasty it caused an endangered turtle to blush so hard it had a heart attack and died.

I may have taken some creative license.

The Caleshans accepted Sojun's proposal to join him in fighting the Serenitas partly because they were impressed by his godlike powers, but mainly because they had, since the unification, longed for an adversary to compete with, and Serenitas seemed to be the ultimate kind of adversary. I must say, I admire the Caleshan's competing drive, joining sojun out of competing fervour rather than (while it was also present) self-preserving instinct seems impressive.

Also, unrelated, I noticed most of your characters (Sojun, Archaeus, Kal'Shazzar, etc) seem have a similar art style, do you make them yourself?

I learned that wood carving is a time-honored tradition within their nation and that their wood carvings are quite splendid. I also learned that in their capital city there is a special place for sculptures, which is known as Sculpture Alley. Which is pretty cool and adds a lot to their culture.

I learned that although face value it is a democratic federal republic, it is seemingly at its heart really more of a stratocracy with democratic characteristics, and it is interesting how they found themselves with such a system of government. I would assume that once more history gets fleshed out especially conflicts, that information will give a better context as to why their Republic formulated such a system.

Despite being a similar size to Java, it has a bit of everything in terms of geography. From Glaciers to Deserts to Wetlands, and apparently "much more." This would make it not only a megadiverse country, but (if placed in the OTL) it would also be the smallest megadiverse country, being less than half the size of the smallest megadiverse country IRL: Ecuador.

Pretty interesting, tbh. I wonder how a nation that diverse, yet so small, would play out.

Their nation has changed its military tactics several times over history, and while they were focused on trench style warfare prior to 1963 they quickly switched to mechanised warfare following an invasion.

Strangely enough, while a 'Germany' exists, it controls neither the majority or, nor the traditional borders of, the German Nation. In fact the borders of Europe make zero sense by all mean: There's an independent Alsace-Lorraine, there's two Italies, a big Hungary and a Yugoslavia that controls Bosnia-Herzegovina and a reduced Serbian state. And uh. The Ottomans control most traditionally Kurdish lands.

I learned that English is really bad, for one. The other thing I learned is that the Restored Danelaw has almost the exact same legislative parliamentary body as modern-day England, complete with a House of Lords who fill in lifelong appointed roles. The history seems a little bit different though, but I'm not entirely sure, because reading through the English is burning my retinae out.

Right now there are 4 Imperial Realms - Mun Empire, so far the mightiest of all; Da Mogshu, superpower run by a god-king; Vukshao, which is now crumbling; and Majai Order, which is pretty isolated from other realms.

Opiachus is, by all means, a Ecumenopolis but the fact the whole planet has been turned into a city doesn't mean the city's population density is high.

The second part of the name is the anglicisation of the local word Flabéztür, which roughly translates to "Kingdom of Gold". Never found out what "Rhim" means, though.
