They call it the 'FourHorn', and have both domesticated & feral populations of the species present today (It was introduced from another Reality, as domesticated livestock, by an immigrating Human culture that has since wiped itself out...): It's a member of the genus Sivatherium, related more closely to Giraffes & Okapi than to Deer, and some of the more modern reconstructions than the ones that I've been using give it a less moose-like build. There have been suggestions that in RL the genus lasted until very late prehistory and maybe even early historical times, based on some pieces of artwork from those times that could be interpreted as showing examples: The most recent fossils known in RL so far, however, are around 800'000 years old.[/skip]
