Most of the info is hosted on a seperate fandom page rather than on nationstates itself.

Eh... No... that's just the standard European plug (in its French variant). Which I renamed in my personal canon. But there is nothing unique about its design.

The Mythical continent of Mu actually exists in their timeline and is where AN is located.

Partially inspired by the Third Odyssey mod for EU4, this nation is essentially a Byzantine successor state in South America that has fused together Ancient Greek Religion with Greek Orthodox Christianity. It mixes the aesthetic of Byzantium and Ancient Greece, with very open and liberal social values but with an Imperial Monarchy. NS stats are referenced but are not strictly followed to a T.

The capital, New Constantinopolis, is the most populated city of Arandias. It's also widely regarded as the economic and cultural heart of Arandias. The name "New Constantinopolis" comes from, well, Constantinople. The nation's name, "Arandias", stems from the founder of the nation, Kōstantinos Arándoulos. According to legend, he saw a vision of Jesus himself, that warned him that Constantinople would fall to the Muslims. Arándoulos, using his skills as a talker, convinced the Constantinoplan King to diverge Constantinople's last resources to fund an expedition into a new world to save Constantinople from the muslims.

This nation seems to rule over all of the Earth (what's left of it) in a post-climate change world (where the sea level has risen dramatically). Also, there are colonies on Mars.

The United Nations of Aphrodia isn't a single country, it's an international organization. Think the UN but it actually does stuff lol. Good general overview tho

Yes, 25 of them in total. (the USA by comparison has 51 legislatures. How is mine any different, apart from the double federal structure?)

This one has went through a lot of tough stuff, going back to around the Civil War era through the "rifles in service" factbook. I am more than just speechless that most of these stories are quite old in years, explaining its slow rise to one of the more well renowned superpowers of the early 21st century. An extra bonus, I even liked the slight uniqueness of their flag, having the bottom stripe orange. 😊

A Pan-Asian survivalist nation who doesn't need international help when disaster strikes, and is only one nation away before total reunification of the continent.

The revolutionaries started strong, at a point stagnated because of a lack of communication, and when a woman decided to proclaim herself as commander in chief, they started to gain again...

I've probably skimmed through it the wrong way but in reality, especially considering the rising individualism of modern wannabe revolutionaries, this wouldn't be possible.
