good, but she still needs a factbook. you're a good character writer, my man, just don't let that all go to waste on one guy. hell, writing the Halloween coda would be a good start.

I know sob

In my defense, my latest Alastair dispatch actually advanced the plot.

that's also a good start.

I personally only did that once in my IC responses for you; I can read the English just fine, I just know some of my characters would definitely throw a bitch fit over it. I would suggest lightening up on it, though, since F7 is notorious for fixating on shallow stuff like that.

Your post wasn't what prompted my comment here. My last few responses in both the Factbook Information thread and the Factbook Line Thread have basically been along those lines (though maybe I'd get more posts of that like in the Leader threads too if I posted there more often 🙄)

If it's any... consolation, I guess, most of my recent responses in F7 that haven't been from a few posters here have been pretty bad too.

One of my problems is that I find writing about Alastair and his struggles so interesting, and my brain has fixated on that enough that I'm lowkey writing a serial over here. Like, Marie definitely has potential--going from having her husband by her side to being the sole executive of an entire country is definitely an intriguing premise. And her personality (she's heccin' anxious and a total Gryffindor, but not stereotypically "heroic/chivalrous/hates Slytherin" way because, like, who says she's even read the HP books?) also adds to her interestingness. But whenever I write her, she's grieving, in a way, over what happened to Alastair. I guess I'd be the same way in her position, but it isn't like she's doing nothing but feel horribly about him. She has to make sure WF doesn't become a total dumpster fire.

As for Wil, well, he's got a prodigal son-type past that is in my head, but I haven't expanded upon it in writing.

Addendum: KG, when did your sig get so GOOD?

What's hinted at is good, but I definitely understand the execution being harder than the idea. You'll do great, you just have to sit down and write, yknow?

I'd like to write about my leader more, but don't really get the chance. how lonely it must be at the top, this massive cult of personality surrounding you, but so few people who actually know you.

Same. I'm honestly thinking of retconning her to be younger since writing about a young and inexperienced person forced into the dictator's seat is probably fun.

One of my major long-term goals is to really dig into the meat of interpersonal court politics at the upper echelons of my government and digging into how growing up in the country has affected their lives up to that point. I haven't really gotten much beyond a general mental outline for my leader, I don't even have a real name for them yet. Still...
