Or depressing, rather. The song talks about contemplating suicide;

Huh...that's weird. Though, it might be because the album came out less than a week ago, and Monch isn't that popular.

I know the feeling, new Impaled Nazarene album came out 4 days ago, it's also relatively underground band so of course all I could find in youtube is ~10 minute long studio teaser. And I'm too broke to buy it. Though it might be the first 2014 I actually buy ☐

Pharoahe Monch – The Jungle

Man, I love the production on this, but Monch doesn't always deliver the lyrics that well. He's dope on this though, and the last few tracks as well

Chvrches-Gun

I will be a gun and it's you I'll come for~

Just posting this song for that line. Don't really care for the song that much. Sounds too much like some cheesy 80's synthpop or something.

Chvrches-Broken Bones (Bonus Track)

One of my favorite tracks by them is a bonus track.

New York Times
Democracy

Two of my favorite songs by them are the ones where she sings ominously, and just generally feels like their darkest

But some of my favorites are also the ones where she sings all "sweet", or whatever.

I think her style of singing being ominous just makes it creepier ☐

Well, as far as pop music can be creepy is concerned.

Catch them and kill them
