I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

Your nation is like a son. What it does right is your merit, as well as what it does wrong is your fault. When you praise it, be lucid and avoid exaggeration. Praising it too much can make it indolent. On the other hand, when you criticize it, be harsh, but do not ridicule it. Do your best to improve it, not through derision or disdain, but through good examples and dedication.

"Atlas" by Coldplay (from the movie Catching Fire)

Honestly, I didn't really like this song at first. After hearing it multiple times, it has grown onto me.

"I Don't Wanna Miss a Thing", by Aerosmith, from the soundtrack of one of my candidates for "Worst Movie of All Time With a Budget over $100M", "Worst Movie of All Time Involving Collisions of Celestial Bodies", and "Second Worst Movie of All Time Starring Ben Affleck".

I can explain. I lost a bet (really), and my friend made me sing the song (I hammed it up really badly), and now I'm listening to the original to see how it compares. Turns out I actually did about the same quality, in my own home, on a shitty laptop mic. Speaks volumes about the condition of Steven Tyler in 1998.

Pretty much why it is my favorite. Probably one of my favorite Lorde songs altogether.

Not sure...to be honest, I don't really understand how their whole song thing works. I find it cool they get a bunch of bands, even if some I don't care about, doing songs for the film, even if they're covers (like the Lorde one, though it might as well be a new song. The best kind of covers). But I don't understand how they connect to the movie in any way. I don't even really hear any of the songs on the soundtracks actually in the movie.
