Pulling off a bank heist?

Stealing from a respected bank: amputation of a hand and foot (if you're not lynched first)

Due to the current and intense social malaise, robbing an unpopular bank suspected of charging interest and/or ripping of customers and/or workers would be left unpunished as no one would care.

regicide (if a monarchy), killing the foremost living human authority in YN's state religion (if a religious state that is not a monarchy) or killing foremost authority on gender equality (if YN is a secular republic)

Well, since AN didn't leave anything for me, I'm going to use the one above them.

Since we are technically a republic but practice a hereditary system for the selection of the leader I'm going to go with the regicide option.

Depends on the type of riot: peaceful, no crime; ww3, prison time of 1 week to 5 years

Some gov members may file a duel challenge or a personal offense lawsuit (which is a small fine)- they consider themselves to be above such things... Or are just bored and want to fight people for shits and giggles (like Alexandria).

Dueling?

Provided both have contractually given consent, not a crime. Otherwise, it's assault with a deadly weapon, and attempted murder or regular ol' proper murder.

If it's as bad as the desecration of a saint's grave or terrorist attack on a cathedral during services, it's life imprisonment.

Being a serial killer with more than 10-20 victims.

Depends on what the gang in question has done, and depending on the state (or whether it's the federal courts) the punishment could be anywhere from execution or life imprisonment to a hefty fine.

Killing your training officer while in military training because he was being too mean
