Virtual matter makes some Godulan ships virtually indestructible because virtual particles, while lacking any sort of mass, still keep energy at momentum, therefore rendering them unable to be affected by projectiles made out of things that have matter.

The result of a soviet social experiment on three (3) settlements in the Czech-German border, "Dihganistan" is a break-away state populated largely by the Tajik which is recognized by pretty much no country except for Russia which guarantees their independence.

They were established as a colony by vikings in North America which was annexed by the "Kingdom of Dania" (Denmark?) following fears of invasion by neighbouring Anglish and Frisian colonies. The country sided with the "Germanic Coalition" during their world's equivalent of WW1. Since last year, it has been involved in a war with NewMercia.

Shtet is a Yiddish-speaking Jewish state in central Europe founded after the defeat of Nazi Germany, stemming partially from the Bund movement of the early 20th century. Hebrew is also spoken as a revived language, although its revival was hindered until the 1980s by its association with the bourgeoisie.

They are a very small nation who exist as a result of a USSR social experiment to create an artificial ethnic identity. The people are of Russian, Czech, and German origin yet they speak Tajik.

That despite being a presidential republic, their leader is styled as a Punong which can be translated in English as Chief or Leader. Speaking of which, they must have some fantastic healthcare and anti-ageing technologies/products, as their current Punong looks to be at least 20 years younger than he actually is, and he even has two teenage children! Either that or he has been blessed with some quite fortunate genetics.

The Universe of Thakia is an offshoot of their original universe, produced as a semi-side effect of a ritual intended to halt a demonic invasion of their Earth. It also caused their magical capabilities to be reduced to next-to-nothing, which I suppose given the circumstances is a more than equitable trade.

They can trace their history back to the 1008 CE when King Æthelred II of England somehow colonized parts of the County of Holland. Which sounds weird because you'd think the Holy Roman Empire wouldn't stand for something like that.
