There's always a chance for writing sites, unless they explicitly stated, to go the way of NSFW and porn as far as your eyes can see.

I mean, there are nations on this website that already went that way a loooooong time ago.

Damn and I though the ISDF reporting stuff was controversial... Too bad no one archived this thread- I'd very much appreciate being able to read all of this... Holy shit I remember seeing this thread in "recent posts" and being tempted to click on it! I can only imagine how epic it would've been for Laka to participate there... And get DEAT'ed... Well, not so epic

Fun fact, IIRC, the spy drama between the Mexican DFS and the Cuban DGS resembled a hide-and-seek game in which the loser got deported, but nobody actually ever got killed.

Not a whole lot of characters who happen to be medical professionals do other kinds of lesser known treatments like bioterapy, in particular, maggot therapy. Maggot therapy's got some real interesting historical value.

Edit: A diché regarding leaders who just happen to be doctors and just do doctoring stuff with futuristic technology.

I feel like the historical knowledge of people in this site is primarily stronger on WW1, WW2, and the Cold War, meaning that most points of divergence and ideologies of interest came or is dominant from around these times (whether low or high effort). There is thus less content on the historical periods before that, where critical society-building, population spread, and institutional development happens. I think a divergence with a focus on these era can led to a significantly more interesting world of esoteric (but in its context, completely rational) ideologies, history, socio-cultural order, and maps.

Well, yeah, people tend to focus on those events more often because the 20th century was real FUBAR after World War 1. And after plenty of interwar era wars right up to the Second World War and, after that war, the Cold War, TARFU and onwards because people just came up with new and interesting things to practice with, like, phones and hydrogen bombs. Long summary short: people here are more familiar with the 20th century because a hundred and twenty-something years ago, stuff then was, and still is, TARFU. And it's just way more interesting.

better yet is a conlang which is just english but with a scrambled vocabulary and if you can be assed, muddled grammar.

It's not an RP thing, but I always chuckle when I get that one issue about loanwords and linguistic purism on this account, since the 'loanwords' that are supposedly 'contaminating the native tongue' is just French.

I mean I get that the game is in English and so the concept of translation convention is at play here, but I like to imagine it's some crazy people who don't know what language this nation even speaks and everyone else is like 'Loanwords contaminating our native tongue? These are just French, we literally speak French here, it's our official language. What are you people even babbling about?' when I get the issue on Aikoland.

I hate that trope so much. I totally admit Wolven is just a mix of West Norse and Danish, but at least it isn't a relex.
