It's unfortunate to admit that I do have 2 nations on my ignore list. To clarify and maybe to reassure, it's not any of you here.

Often times it's better to just move on while never forgetting.

Wait, you're using the friend/foe list? I've only seen it a couple of times, but never used it.

It's more useful for those who post in II or (gasps) NSG than it is for F7, mind you, but I remember a certain number of fellows I was driven to put on ignore in F7 a while back. Foe Listing is a hit-miss on F7. By design, it hides their post and you just move on to do the nation above them, but that feels as deliberate skipping which I will admit that I have a bit of a difficult time avoiding. Overtime, I learned just to wait patiently and let another person do that foe of mine, then move on as per usual.

As HoA said, it was meant more for the other forums, not for AN games.

EDIT: Maybe it's not too bad and too late to start expanding the Foe List.

I'd rather not have unattractive leaders myself. With an array of 1930s Hollywood actors to choose from, it's tempting for me to just write new leaders as men in sharp suits and slicked hair. But yes, I don't understand being horny on main myself.

The thing is a young leader who's ill-prepared could be super fun to write about and doesn't have to be an excuse to homypost. I was considering having a young leader who's not prepared to lead at one point but I figured young leaders in general are super overdone regardless if they're done for the horny or not.
