"The nihilism I believe in is not just any nihilism, but cosmic nihilism. This is the belief that the cosmos are wholly indifferent, and that there is zero foundation for any and all systems of values. Aims, goals, traditions, beliefs, morality, none of it actually matters. It's all bullshit, nothing more than petty biological instincts. Aims and goals are useful to the species because they elevate it above its competition. Traditions are useful to the species because they give it a sense of community and belonging. Beliefs are useful to the species because they fill the void with false meaning. Morality is useful to the species because it keeps the individual members of the species from hurting each other. But the species itself doesn't matter. The cosmos cares not whether any given species lives or dies, it is unthinking, unfeeling! There's no point to 'making the most' out of life, because life itself does not matter. A given universe could be teeming with lifeforms, or be completely and utterly lifeless, and either way, that universe would not know the difference, or give a shit. What is a few trillion lives? Nothing. At the end of the day, nothing matters. Nothing at all.

Yes, I realize as well that means my own goals don't matter either. And that's fine. I'm not conquering for any greater purpose. I'm conquering because I'm bored, and conquest is the one last great challenge for my genius mind. I'm doing it because I can, and because it feels good. The invasion and subjugation of whole multiverses is a game to me, really, something to pass the time until I eventually die. My empire wasn't built to last, and I don't care what happens to it after I die, because I'll be dead by that point, ceased to exist. Life is meaningless and then you die. We're all nothing more than just random assortments of atoms, acting out of self interest, mindlessly seeking pleasure. I'm no different there. I'm just smarter than everyone else, and my ocular sensory organs are open to the pointlessness of literally everything. Why should I hold myself accountable for anything I've done? It's not like anything I do actually matters."

PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitragrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. |

I must commend and condemn Zen. On one hand Zen was a wholesale progressive force in his people's history. He empowered republican and democratic systems. This nuance may, for many, be overshadowed by what I am about to add but it is important to clarify. The guy isn't a cartoon villain by any means. To the contrary indeed.

That said, to a far less favorable end, Zen is an unrepentant racial chauvinist. The man is a sincere advocate of racial supremacy. He is an expansionist force who, in the prime of his political power, subjugated a galaxy's worth of people and on a personal level is undeniably hungry for power. This other side of Zen is utterly untrustworthy and disgusting. Thankfully, Zen seems to be far more interested in magical power than political power and his successor is far, and I mean far, better a leader in this respect.

Stein, in contrast, has improved the rights of minorities, strengthened secularism in governance, and further strengthened democratic and republican rights even moreso than Zen. Unfortunately even she has delusional notions of so-called "benevolent" autocracy. Nonetheless, I wish her favor in her wrestling with the clerics.

"Socialism, especially when it's 'revolutionary' threatens the pillars of society. To even contemplate supporting such ideology is a crime against the nature of man. Arek's actions and leadership have degenerated his people and his nation into a collective of weak creatures who have forgotten the path to morality. To rule 'for the people' is to rule against the natural order of hierarchy, in which all must fight to deserve to be judged innocent. We will judge him without mercy for he engages in his moral depravity while supposedly adhering to the true faith. One cannot be faithful and also a so-called 'socialist revolutionary' for to be both is to be a heretic who twists the intended hierarchy humanity must follow."

Then again, I guess maybe the laws of physics are different in their world, or some sort of advanced technology was discovered. I mean, I still consider the RCAS to be very advanced technologically, having entered the space-faring age to some extent.

I would hardly describe an atheist ruler as being the ruler of a religious empire. Besides, I can likely drink him under the table. Something may work out, I'm open to the idea of other nations swearing subservience to mine, even if it isn't quite as thrilling as a straight military conquest.

Ah yes, your space colonies. I love how tiny and cute they are. It's adorable that you consider yourself 'advanced'. Truly adorable. What have you colonized outside your star system? Anything? Or are you just building colonies on immediate celestial bodies? Do you even have an alcubierre drive? No? How laughable that a workhorse technology for us is something you have yet to invent. Remind me how 'technologically advanced' you are?

You, conquer me? You don't even have alcubierre drives, let alone anything to cross into other universes. To put it bluntly, so your dullwit can understand - You can't. We are somewhere you can never reach.

And there you are going off again, caring about your citizens and their worthless lives. You won't ever see me doing that. Lives are expendable, damn it. I don't care how many we lose, we have reserves, and we'll breed more. We'll done more if necessary.

Maybe there's a fundamental difference in our ruling styles, Pickett. I don't sit around to govern my people, I have admirals for that. My primary role as leader is as commander-in-chief. I am ruler because I am the leader of all of our militaries. I consult with the other admirals over strategy, before making the final decisions. In my country, we have a name for politicians, bureaucrats, and corporate leaders: worm babies. Because like tiny worm babies, they are useless parasites that feed on the otherwise elegant totalitarian regime. They provide nothing of use in exchange for the time and resources they engorge themselves on. So, I had them all killed. I run a military dictatorship. All of my appointed government positions go to high ranking military officers. They have the knowledge and discipline required to rule effectively. As long as they continue to do their jobs, and I continue to expand, I can do whatever I want. Which is what I always do. Even founding my empire is just another case of me doing what I want. You thought I had some grand vision? Hate to break it to you, but this is all just a game to me. I'm a military dictator conquering the omniverse because I was bored."

A national syndicalist regime no less. The ordinary Iranian wouldn't even be considered "honorary white" in your country and the last time a man called us "Aryans", Iran was invaded by two nations. Though you claim yourself to be a man of the working class and for the people; you have instead alienated the brown workers in your vanity project of a "heroic white-working class" and a seemingly inflexible democracy where your ideological opponent don't seem to have a fighting chance in this "direct democracy". I think Iranians and people of the Third World for that matter are civilized enough to set up a democracy and have working nation-states."

"Actually, Iranians and Middle-Eastern people are generally considered white within the RCAS. We actually have good relations with the Federation of Arab Republics and have fought along with them against the Azanian menace. Iran and the RCAS have some relations, even if ideologically there are some differences on the question of monarchy. Well, having a trade partner is more important than my personal anti-monarchism when it comes to RCAS foreign policy. Our main opposition to the Middle East is to the religions that have spawned from there, and I think the secular governments of the Middle East have proven themselves to be able to control them. Sadly, the same can not be said of the Islamic State, which dominates what was historically Pakistan and Afghanistan.

And yes, Jews are considered white too in the RCAS. Also, we prefer to avoid Nazi terms like 'Aryan'. Seriously, I actually have had bad experiences with Neo-Nazis, both before the Partition and after the Risorgimento.

I just wanted to clear things up."

Republic of Confederate American States and Syndicates

No, it is not the Confederate States of America. No, it's not the South either. SU stands for 'States and Unions'. The right acronym is RCAS. Please read the Factbook.

He is a good person, and I admire that. However, he has recognizable flaws on a personal level, and that's where I stand. And I would appreciate it if he would take the time to meet other individuals like himself, and not try to impose his personal opinion on others.

"Huh, you're a tragic figure. You're surrounded by a myriad of extremists and nobility. It's ironic to think that being a moderate is a death sentence and yet you've bravely taken such a position. It must've taken great strength for one man such as yourself to dare to be a voice of reason. Most tend to put their ideology ahead of their country's well-being and here you are, a politician devoid of haughtiness on the surface but at the end of the day, you're just an expert at swaying impressionable minds.

I do wonder how long it'll take for you to compromise until you find out that your political platform is just moved by the whims of others, vulnerable to the special interests that run the country. At some point, you need to put your foot down. I understand that your country's political climate is precarious but as of now, are you happy being the middleman? Well, so long as it keeps your nation in one piece...you can try. Try not to die of the stress of the office though. An even worse fate is to leave this world and your country prematurely.

Sorry to be morbid but you're just human after all. Remember death."
