The people in charge of the Rehensa system before the NR and the Insurgency duked it out were an agricultural corporation. I wonder what Farmer Larry and Rancher Ted thought about the sky lighting up for absolutely no reason?

Although the Caller is de jure selected by the Council itself, the Caller's influence over their heir is vast, to the point where the position is de facto hereditary. Ari inherited the position after the death of her father, and she herself has not yet chosen a successor, primarily due to the cultural customs regarding female inheritability.

Okay, I know this isn't really related to YN, but I had no idea that Europe had bison, and honestly, I'm a little shocked. To add something more related, though, I learned they're kinda like the Swiss in terms of neutrality.

The Hamatu is not only a superpower in their world. But, also apparently a republic and one of the few functioning ones at that. This is a quite disarming for me since I have often seen countries with so-called 'goddesses' as head of state to be mostly just relegated to the category of bog standard empires or democratic in name only.

Canada was affected by the wars in their neighboring nations, but magical elves came out of wormhole all of a sudden.

The humans asked the treant if magic was real the treant said yes'n't

things then got scary afterwards, so the Canadians went with the elves to their magic dimension

That they're led by a handsome bishounen (for some reason) who also somehow has a Polish name named "Kazimir", and the really interesting part I forgot to tell you was that this Kazimir guy really has a hot young mother who is erm, that kind of mom that you see in erm, h.... anime?

Oh, and they have Diffusion, too, magic powers, that and they have this Homo Antithesis, like it looks creepy with tentades oozing out of its shadows.

Oh and they call themselves "socialist" somehow...

Their constitution has far more articles than many real ones- including sections on ideological diversity, the duration of the powers of the President, and size of National Parliament. They're missing a few chapters, though.

They have an in depth constitution covering everything from the term length of the premier to ministry sub divisions, it was also amended as recently as May this year.

Compared to the old Galactic Empire, the Insurgency is basically just a paltry warlord host, with only 2.8 million in personnel and a fleet of only 63 Star Destroyers (let's assume they're fully equipped with fightercraft, and planetside equipment).

Apparently, before the Deoch Revolution, there was a war where the Russians and the...HRE I think? They took up their weapons and went straight monkey mode on the fucking Turkish, poor guys, I feel bad for 'em, as they had to give up their European lands or risk getting beaten to death.

Putin was defeated in 2012 by Nikolayevich Aleksandrov, who turned Russia into a superpower again (but through corrupt methods). He was replaced by Nikolai Suvarov after a military coup in 2017. Their military is known for their use of electric weapons, and weapons R&D is more conservative compared to the US.
