While most of the population is irreligious, they have a lot of religious diversity. One of the religions practiced is Mercerism, which preaches empathy and altruism. The actual religious, theological aspect of Mercerism is unclear, though.

Heaven is not a metaphysical or mythical place, it is materially real enough to be engaged in wars, as are an assortment of individuals referred to as "gods" and even ancient Germanic tribes. Very curious....how did they get there from Earth then?

The first Harmonic Empire period originally comprised of 2 states: the Westmarch Empire, and the Eostre Commonwealth, both lead by the same family. The first Harmonic Empire was formed from these 2 empires combining, and the union lasted for 240 years when Asger Gomryrth allied his side of the empire with the Demon Queen, causing a war from the Gunhild Germainth's side of the empire. Gunhild Germainth's empire won, and this ended the first Harmonic Empire.

A lot of their weapon systems utilize some form of "hardlight". Except it seems to behave in a similar manner to a solid, and have comparable mass. What makes it light then? Isn't the whole point of hardlight to not have any significant measure of mass?
