"I've said it before and I'll say it again. Alistair isn't a terrible person. It's just that he has one flaw. One major flaw. The man seems incessant on drinking himself to an early grave. Though this isn't the main problem. The main problem is that he has a family. A wife and children. When you have a family like that you lose the option to allow yourself to die. When you have a family like that it becomes your duty to live for them. Allowing yourself to be detrimentally affected by your own actions when you should be looking after your family is incredibly self-centered. But what do I know. I've never had an actual family before." - The Phoenix

"I've never heard of this man before. This 'Queen of England'..... Wait what? He's not the Queen of England. Oh sorry, this Mr. Albert Price seems like an interesting character. In many ways he reminds me of my brother; incredibly laid-back and doesn't take shit from anyone or anything. His law enforcement is somewhat interesting as well. Interesting in the sense that he doesn't enforce the law at all. Despite this, whether out of respect or fear, the people aboard Miranda-22 are inclined to keep violent crime to a minimum. Yes, Bertie is an interesting man indeed. I should very much like to meet him one day." - The Phoenix

All the would-be pirates in one place without any real incentive to stay there, since their bit of the map is pretty clearly stamped "here be dragons". Ain't too fond of your ideology, for one, though on the surface there ain't nothing wrong with wantin' to help folks get equal with one another. The whole "cult-of-personality" kind of flips that little switch right to off, you know? I though the 2100s decided pretty thoroughly that wasn't an admirable mode of governance, even if it is in this case centered around a little tea-chugger rather than a strongman. But... eh, I guess I can't pass judgement. You're literally magical, after all, like a goddamn sparkly fairy. If it works, it works, and that's all that really matters in the end."

Well, maybe it's time for tea in the United Federation of Zitragrad, because everyone is now on break. Even the tops of the Secret Service grinds to a halt for tea at 15:00 (almost).

"Just think about it. Paying taxes is a duty except when you are rich and powerful -- then it becomes a charity to be praised. But at least, he has decided to pay up, good for him. No, actually... he would be great doing what he was doing before he went to make his own war instead of finding glory from existing ones."

"The newsreels in Zitragrad have been disappointed they have not seen the utterly gracious King of New Carthagea in most badass uniform leading his men with a flag in his hand into the war in Tunisia like how he used to obliterate terrorists in Afghanistan. Where were you when your soldiers are dying under your banner and in your name? It's not fun... and the war has already ended! In fact, how that the whole war is omitted from his biography is strange. When my husband bombed civilian towns in the Civil War, we record it, too. I'm an enthusiast of log notes, details, and pedantry, you see. I have 1,247 recordings from the Civil War. They are great proofs when people argue about your war crimes."

"Well, they can be their proofs as much as yours but you see want I mean. Now though, I only find it strange that your nation's election allows so much foreign support and endorsement it looks kind of strange, as if Carthagea wants other nations to choose a new prime minister for it. But there we go, we are not the type who get our hands in other people's business. I probably complain toooooo much for someone who said that she has nothing to do with other people's business. 🤔"

"Intel-1 calls SSHQ. Target nation doesn't have military information. Yeah. That's probably why it had like 20 allies during the war."

The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. Leader - Ambrosia von Carstein

"I shall start off by responding to what was previously mentioned of me... constructive is always good. I've always listened to some good opinions from other leaders and it has shaped the nation for the better. But... my situations with these people are not typical like almost all other nations of the universe. this once empty planet which I settled alone on and built everything from scratch. the people are not from here. I offered them the opportunity to live here from another war-torn society. they all like permanent guests of my home, away from the hardships of life, giving them all the opportunity to let them unleash their creativity without worrying about anything else. perhaps this is something that Victoria doesn't understand when it comes to the whole "right to rule" thing... I do see her point in having them be able to defend themselves, which they do have set up to learn how to do so, along with the guard. but there's only so much that they can do with a tiny population. they are not obligated to stay if they want to take lives into their own hands, they can ask to leave if they so wish, but they choose to stay, so who am I to deny them after what they have been through? anyway, enough about me"

"its good to see that there is someone in Bloodshade who is much more approachable, no offense to Victoria. shame that she didn't have a happy early life, having to be around people she didn't care about along with the abuse from her parents (I'm starting to see that's quite a common occurrence among good leaders...) It seems as though there are quite a lot of things that we have in common at least, such as the right to universal healthcare, the freedoms to worship, civil rights. Her hatred towards animal cruelty? honestly I cannot side with her more than I already can on this. there is way too much senseless cruelty going on in the universe and its refreshing to see those who would care for the wellbeing of animals... I really do love her current place of living, just a small cozy apartment. sometimes I like to have such as well. I have to mention her hair as well, I love how long it is. while I could not have mine so long, I definitely find it very nice on others. Overall, my views on her is positive. I find her really nice, so maybe she will be my go-to when it comes to diplomacy with Bloodshade, if the interest in strengthening relations is mutual, of course.

"The dream unveils yet another omen; these portents shall not distress me for all their urgency. Of them both shall I speak, for each of them is an abomination all their own.

The first stands at the height of a false god; the poison-giver; the demon self-entombed. A soldier of old eons and future shadows who has long lost his way. He knows nothing of the Dream; nothing of supremacy; nothing of the order of things and nothing of regality. It is claimed he saved mankind from calamity yet could not save himself; to proclaim this a tragedy is to be ignorant of the hubris clearly shown. That he appreciates nature; that he adores meagre and unsightly animals; these matter little to I. That he adorns himself with names as an upstart monarch adorns himself with epithets; this all reveals the truth of him more to my mind than any trivial frivolity could.

The second is a country incarnate; a pantheon onto its own. She proclaims herself nature and so dismisses the gods and the Dream and all the work they have wrought; this I shall not and cannot forgive her. She is naught to me but a demon of luminosity; usurping the pottery of the blaze above in her own ambition. She remakes the world around her in her image; and in the life after she will come to regret her narcissism."

"We can appreciate an organic such as himself who has been through such turmoil, but still clings on to his nation despite all the misfortune that has befallen it. Despite the less than ideal geopolitical position he has found himself in, he still manages to maintain his position without tipping off the Japanese of his acts of resistance. We can also appreciate Françoise for his removal of the Union's and students that were threatening his reign which is more than can be said for other leaders we have seen here. Of course, this organic has problems mostly due to the fact that his power consolidation hasn't gone far enough. What he should've done is arrest (or kill) the other political parties within his nation and then replace them with his own men while maintaining the look of a democracy as to not upset the people. After that all resources can be put into finding ways to remove the Japanese yoke on his nation. Overall, despite some failings we see François as a decent organic leader, but if he were to implement our suggestions then we would be willing to call him great."

"Paramount is a designer of hedonism?! Ha, ha, ha! Don't make me laugh! Now, let's keep focus. Ederik Jozef is a rare and strange bird in this world. He is not fighting for freedom, but some his policies are not exactly tyrant. What is his agenda? Because culturally, we'd both agree and disagree on many things. Something feels off... and this is intriguing. Perhaps an opinion of Kaiser on us will reveal more about him?

Because he lets the people to bear arms and guarantees them freedom of speech, but to us, he is too traditionalist and there are oteh problems too.

So far, he is an unknown variable. He is one of many examples, that world is not white and black."-Shawn Bjornson

"Hmm... Shawn is way too barbaric for my tastes. I'm sure company with him would be fun, but I prefer more elegant outings and friends. Now, that isn't to say that I love to indulge myself in some of life's more colorful adventures, but those are rare and few. I'd be rather neutral on this man as long as he doesn't impede my business and my way of life. Surely, someone who is carefree would understand~"

"Brother" Nikolai... God, did you come up with that title yourself? Makes the State seem all that more incestuous, if you ask me. Freud would have a field day.

You started a cult of personality just because you wanted more power. Somehow, you convinced all of Mayakava of your divinity in just 10 years. I don't know if that speaks more to your manipulative genius, or the stupidity of your people.

Anyway, god-emperor or not, I don't care, "Brother."
