"It is incredible that despite our many differences, our overlapping goals are inherently similar. We both have powers that we use to help others. Whereas she is gifted with, uh, magic (what? The Tilminese Federation is a totalitarian fascist theocracy ruled with an iron fist by The Overseers, a fanatical organization of theocratic fundamentalists seeking to eradicate 'modern degeneracy'. Has scenic architecture, no light pollution, quiet streets and public executions for the smallest crimes. Oh and one in every four Tilminese has died from starvation, disease, execution, forced labor, and genocide ever since the Overseers have taken power but that's not too important.

"The Muslim peoples have fell on hard times after their Golden Age as they have fell to the follies of foreign imperialism and in its emptiness for moral and political guidance; they filled it with religious radicalism but Arslan gave his people a moderate path to Islam. Arslan's fear of multiparty democracy dividing the people is not unfounded but the method in which he got rid of constitutionalism was rushed and sloppy. For it is preferable to have the finger on the puppet (prime minister) to maintain the illusion of constitutionalism and political freedom."

"I appreciate the Vice Admiral's pragmatism. I like that he doesn't necessarily condemn an ideology on the opposite side of the political spectrum from his own because it may perhaps conflict with his own personal beliefs. His nation is his number one priority, and that is a very good trait in a leader. I also very much respect his history in the navy. And I appreciate the way he holds the belief of neutrality on the world stage even if that's something which isn't really possible to practice in reality. Francois is a survivor, and thankfully because of him his nation is too."

"Who decided that choosing a teenager to lead their country was a good idea, this "Wilkins" is what we here in my country call a populist, And he has proven to be such a thing in his performance, his irresponsible level of public spending and lack of commitment will create a burden for the decades to come, I am not surprised that it is a younger person who sinks his homeland with this so-called socialism, After all, it is in youth that idealism is worshipped and the material impossibilities of reality are ignored in favor of a fictitious dream of equality. There is no doubt in the fact that this man has a serious lack of vision for the future and that his policies will cause more misery than they help to alleviate, I'm not saying that trying to help those who need it most is a bad thing or something to be ashamed of, in fact it's a noble effort, but nevertheless we should always consider the reality and the impact that our actions could have in the future, sometimes you can't help everyone."

It takes about quadruple that time normally. Unless your promotion was under abnormal circumstances like for me and my sister, it doesn't make any sense. They tend to get their powers conveniently to battle their enemies by making shady deals with entities that need them to fight there battles, I myself am part of a species naturally attuned to magic but at the very least that power won't act on its own and needs some convincing.

However per my position I can only say that Ms. Hanako is an exceptional person. While her personal ideology is rather a bit vague if not naive I will not judge a person for wanting the world to be a better place.

Good for you!

Still, you'd think that you'd help put your nation on a path towards self determination and democracy? Come on now, you can't possibly Ah, a fellow Frenchman! I must say, he's stuck in quite the predicament, trapped between the Japanese and the OFN. Reminds me of my own Olympia, autonomous, yet still under Mechyrdian rule. His strategy of passive resistance against Japan is intriguing, and I admire his goal of Lazarian independence.

Ideologically speaking, he and I are far more similar than different. The economic systems that we desire are near-identical, even while I'm more socially conservative than the Admiral is. All in all, my opinion of this man is very positive.
