I remember another forum I use had a board that also had post counts disabled but they enabled them after someone donated like $300 to the goddamn site anonymously lmao.

Both of which are stupid, but one has the ability to throw away $300

I feel called out for having bought Postmaster General. I just genuinely love this site.

I mean I tossed $5 to the site I'm talking about cuz I wanted to support it. (Also I had $5 on one of those pre-paid gift card that I wasn't gonna use on anything else, got a cool orange name and banner below my posts + an unintentional name change bonus that the site owner decided to just keep enabled when I pointed it out)

Yeah, $300 is pretty damn absurd, but calling people stupid for spending $5-10 because of genuine love and support is... out of order.

Oh, no, I didn't quite mean it like that. Buying something because you enjoy the product or want to support the product's maker is an excellent reason to buy something. Buying it for the shiny internet badges- or in the example Gandoor gave, for shiny internet post counter numbers, is... inherently a waste, imo.

To be fair, Postmaster General is 10 bucks. If you have 10 dollars and want to spend it on a website you like, that's fine

I just think 300 dollars is excessive. That's more than I spend on food each month.

To be kinda fair, in the example I gave it wasn't just 'I'm gonna give the site $300 to enable post counts for one board on a forum', the site was genuinely doing a donation drive to support the site and help the owner upgrade the server/hosting because, well I'm gonna be blunt, the goddamn site had gone down like three or four times over the previous two months or something. Dude who owns the site had enough and felt that they needed to upgrade at that point cuz it was unacceptable.

I bought it for the expanded TG boxes, because I get enough of those that I want to save that I feel it's worth it. Usually they're by players that CTE'd or conversations that go on for a few months. I was promised ad-free but it's spotty when it actually works (i.e. it doesn't). Speaking of,

Why would anyone pay to disable ads when uBlock Origin exists?

I don't really give a toss that I'm robbing this site of pennies worth of income tbh.

One thing that I've noticed is that according to the forums, I've 203 posts, but if you click on on my flag, you get to see my total amount of posts, which is somewhere around the 1700's. I've still no idea what qualifies as a post to increase the 203 number.

IIRC posting in F7 doesn't increase the post count under your name.

Can confirm, yes. You have the normal post count, then the normal + F7 post count.

To be fair, you will never know, in [v]'s words see "a Roman orgy" on the sidebar. 😊

But yeah, ads are not that intrusive anyway. Hell, they are actually on the sidebar or in places that did not obstruct or are floating.

F7 posts run the perpetual risk of being deleted via the weekly pruning, so putting them down the official number means your post number would basically fall whenever a threat reached 500 pages or die of obscurity.
