There are some much older folks here. You already know Cuscy, but Jerzylvania or even Pope Joan are over 50 iirc, this sites been around for a long time anyways, so it shouldn't be a surprise

I think part of what does it is the fact that the forums only go back to 2009, so none of the pre-2009 posts exist in an easily accessible form.

So thats why I can't find any old archived forum where people complained about George Bush, or talked about how Youtube will never take of or something.

Now that someone has mentioned George W. Bush I can mention probably the only genuine instance of mod abuse to happen on this site:
There was a mod named Stephistan who, while very outspoken about being left-leaning, seemed to be a perfect example of a mod who puts their own political views aside when dealing with reports and rulebreaking.

Then Bush got reelected and something happened and she went on a brief rampage against conservative posters doing shit like locking threads, banning users, etc. before deleting her own account (seriously, mod checked into the old mod records and they saw that Stephistan's account was deleted by her before they removed the game mod powers from her). They restored her account and let her play as a normal user for a couple more years, but she kept acting like a major nuisance and antagonizing conservatives on this site so they eventually got a permanent boot in 2006.

Well guess what, not a lot people know it, but NationStates is a lot older than almost 20 years. It actually existed since the first humans roamed the Earth. There was a NSG thread found as cave-painting where they were discussing if fire is actually a good invention.

One of the first NSG threads was an argument between the first inhabitants of Southern China and a migrating group of people heading towards the north of the country. It would seem as though China threads have been a thing since the first colonization of China by Homo Sapiens Sapiens. There was an even earlier argument about a few thousand years before that between Homo Sapiens supporters and the other hominids that didn't want Humans there. The Neanderthals also may have gone extinct because of a war started over NSG.

During the middle ages, there was a NSG thread on a scroll about the crusades. One argument that kinda spiraled out of control was if their should be a second crusade. The mods then decided to "delete" the thread by burning the scroll.

They got mad about Manzikert so they decided to call the Pope in only for the crusaders to betray them in 1204.

A cliché is perfectly good threads like this one going off topic and talking about NSG threads from the Mesozoic Era or Byzantines instead of discussing the proper topic.

This thread was claimed as the de facto F7 general a while ago tbh. I don't really think anyone cares so long as there's some "good" discussion going on, and it keeps the thread alive so more people can find it and post their clichés for additional discussion.

(I'm honestly surprised the mods haven't locked this thread as a chat thread tbh, but I guess since we're not role-playing and doing all the shit that got chill/chat threads banned we're OK?)

I think certain people had the right idea when they went with their metagroups to their own personal 'chats' aka RP OOC threads (certain people will know what I'm talking about). But since I'm not part of any metagroups I don't exactly have anywhere else to go and general chat. But yes the threadjack will end now, and I will mention my ultimate cliché to end them all.

It is exactly the same groups of people who post on NS forums, whether that's the F7 'group' or the NSG frequenters. Always the same people in always the same forums with occasional overlap but not much. There are so many recognizable names and then those that nobody remembers because they aren't particularly important and tend to fade away after a while.

Now for an FT cliché: "I am going to create an alien nation, but I don't have enough desire to create a realistic and original alien race. I already have it!! I'll just make a humanoid species that looks like humans. Who is going to bother about that?"

Is bad that i'm posting this using a nation with that kind of alien?

Nah it's fine, Star Trek and Star Wars have ingrained the idea of the Humanoid alien into current popular culture so it makes perfect sense for the 'unoriginal' type of alien to exist. Hey, maybe you can even subvert it and make them incredibly interesting even if they are Humanoids.

I just don't like aliens in my nations to my defence as to why my hyper advanced FTL state doesn't have contact with advanced alien civilizations. Not to say we haven't discovered native life, but just that we have a tendency to wipe it out without mercy and repopulate the planet with our own biosphere.

I really regret my whole time on NSG. If I ever seemed like a troll when posting on NSG years ago, well... I was.

I originally signed on to "trigger right-wingers", I debated in bad faith every step of the way, I lied a bunch about my identity and background to make myself more obnoxious to conservative users, and I tiptoed around the rules to avoid being infraacted for anything specific.

I'd really, really, really like to apologize to anyone here I might have interacted with on NSG.

The American Empire is a socially progressive absolute monarchy run by the heirs of Emperor Norton. It started off at MT but has rapidly advanced to PMT through interdimensional travel. All NSstats are used, except for tax rate and population. Factbooks are currently under reconstruction.

If it helps, a realisation and apology are the first step to being better. ^^

One common cliché in Moderation (an instance of which occurred a few days ago, if you saw it) is users who make 'discussion' threads on whether or not moderation on this website needs changing or reforms, but it becomes pretty obvious early on in the thread that the OP has no actual interest in having a discussion because they've convince themselves that how they want moderation to be like is 100% the correct answer and anyone who disagrees at all is clearly a wannabe mod/kissing up to the mods/etc.
