OOC: Okay, what the actual frick is going on in this thread? Last three non-bump posters all come in without proper leader factbooks, with the last two not even giving good enough posts to actually base their personality around. Please don't do that stuff, it's just unfun for everyone involved.

"Aahh great, another of those weirdos whose entire personality seems sore dumb thing called ideology. I, General Onox, wish to destroy your entire state already, as I, General Onox, said earlier in this letter board here, Having some political Ideology is in no way a replacement for having a personality! I can appreciate that you enjoy a good drink, but otherwise you are as basic of a harlot as they came, I, General Onox, just get bored from reading your like and dislike list and recommend you get an actual hobby or something similar so you can stop being such a boring little twat.

In fact, I, General Onox, also have to question if you actually exist or are just a barely disguised puppet so actual politicians have some sort of symbol, with how little you speak.

Now presenting, the president of Irossia, Ivon Calist

I find no sympathy in this leader. A tyrant in their own right, reinforced via the oppressive force of capitalism and takes the reign of power to themselves instead of spreading it to their own people. They must be deposed if we are to see a free world from them

Since I don't have much in my own factbooks and are just as guilty as AAN, I'll provide a short backstory.

Ivon Calist Grew up in the earlier years of the established Peoples Republic. Back then, the republic was fully centrally planned and suffering from a very impoverished economy with no hope of recovering. After spending his time working in the coal mines when he was 16, he rose to be an economist in the Republic, and eventually president. His economic reforms saved the country from bankruptcy, by creating what he calls: Autonomous Socialism. Applying a decentralized and confederal state socialist model, and combining the representation of Socialism with the efficiency of the meritocratic structure of traditional capitalism.

When i was 16 i was in university- still, his quick thinking and economic skills... Make no goddamn sense! People complain about my intelligence, but this? How am I supposed to believe a man who grew up with NO formal education working in a coal mine as a teenager was able to become a trusted enough economist that he became leader? It doesn't make any sense. I don't care what you claim that is NOT what happened!"

"This particular being, General Onox, what many would consider an apocalypse; a being that would appear from another world, raise an army of monsters and bring an age of darkness over nearly an entire realm, bringing wanton destruction to whatever it seems, and considers those who haven't the capacity to conquer their own fates or grasp them to be unworthy and weak. This, and your general distaste to anyone considering themselves a figure of authority or 'what was once mighty' proves that you desire to try and pose yourself as "superior" through a moderately calculated rampage and general ruling of an iron fist; the mindset of, in layman's terms, a bully of sorts.

We get that you are powerful and all-feared through the realm of Hyrule, but what is it exactly that sent you down this immature path? To exercise your power in order to intimidate the common denizens and smite anything you would consider a threat, a weakling, an insult or otherwise?

Your excessive drinking and smoking already speaks its own stories, perhaps to conceal or repress memories of being once considered an inferior... perhaps abused in some way by what you would deem an authority, or brought to a point where you had felt that you were beneath those you had sought to be, and lashed out in an act of furious revenge concealed as a "righteous" conquest, bringing suffering to everyone and anyone who even has the slightest doubts about you in particular. To bring war to the world is one grave act, but to do this out of a merely personal desire to destroy in your path is, dare I say it, quite immature and sorrowing in prospect.

While I indeed do not hold you in the highest regard, not do I hold any fear as you would wish despite your impressive and remarkable military success and prowess in combat, this insight has allowed me to see a part of you that many, both friend and foe alike, would not have even bothered to try and approach; that your need for violence stems from doubts about your superiority that you still hold deep within. And to conquer these doubts, by restraining, disciplining and managing your temper and ego in the face of your power, is in itself an act of superiority far greater than any fear of destruction could prove. And I hold some belief you can do this; your expertise at commanding an army shows you have triumphed in the face of physical battle, as your name reminds me of the onyx, the gemstone which represents focus, inner strength and willpower, so what is to say you cannot overcome your own mental struggles?

And in the end, conquering one's doubts and traumas, learning to feel compassion for those above and beneath alike and to find their own peace in the end... That, my boy, is what all true warriors strive for."

"Looking at the file for the Upper Directorate, I found that there were 15 members of it. Alright, I guess I'll go over them. I do find the Upper Directorate to be a very interesting body of politicians, being the highest authority in all of the country. All of them are made up of people who specialize in a particular field, that being technology. Some of the members have PhDs, others are specialists, and some are even what's called 'Organic Processing Units'. I don't know what those are, but for the ones who have PhDs and specialize in certain fields, I do really consider those to be impressive. Overall, I think that, compared to many other governments, the Upper Directorate just might be one of the most interesting and unique bodies of government out there, and I do commend the members for their work."

AN:

Waldemar Rochester

"So, who do we got here? Nemo I, the Emperor of Ateria. Alright. First off, I just want to let everyone know that I do not and WILL not support imperial nations whatsoever. But I will admit, I do like what policies Nemo I has enacted, and he seems to be pretty efficient in it. Let's start off with his reconstruction and rearrangement policy. From what I've seen, it seems like the socioeconomic conditions in the country was pretty bad considering the poor economy and the recent rebellions. For one, I am glad he took the time to help reconstruct a nation formerly at war. I view it as imperative, especially after peace. I am also happy for his immediate response to the overpopulation crisis happening in his country, and that too seemed to be very efficient. Also, I am a big fan of his policies of national unity and his discipline/militarism. I prioritize these things very much, and I'm glad to see him do it too. I could end it here, but after finding out about his enacted Thirty day war, not to mention his re-imperialism policy, I can't say that he really is a good leader. I am someone who, once again, is against imperialism, so I condemn him for it. But, disregarding that, he seemed to be a very good leader.

To conclude, I am glad he enacted multiple policies that benefited his country, but I also dislike his policies to make his country imperialist once again. So, he's kinda a mixed bag for me overall."
