“Well, good afternoon to you, your highness Sovereign May. I understand that you have left yourself somewhat vague to us foreign leaders, since any information regarding you is short, and brief. Perhaps that is for the best, no? After all, discretion is safety, though as a constitutional monarch, I feel as if I have more liberty to make myself known, as, well I would not prove a threat to the governance of Tsarstvo Alyaski, which is how I like it, personally.

Ah, but I talk too much. First of all, congratulations on being able to succeed in changing your country's politics in a large, perhaps revolutionary way? Your politics is something our own President shares, though for me, less so. Personally, I fall somewhat on the right side of the spectrum, though I will not argue with good results from other political beliefs, and I will very much not let it jeopardize my feelings towards you. You are talented and effective, though you took the country's power through hereditary means.

But, I unfortunately cannot find much more, as mentioned above. My feelings are positive to you, Sovereign, even if our political beliefs conflict a little.”

Alaska

☐ The Tsardom of

Царство Аляски, or the Russian Empire lives on in it's old colony, Alaska after the conclusion of the Russian Revolution of 1917. Standing with it's allies against the Moscow Accord of Russia and it's alliance members, nevertheless world tensions dwindle and the people of Alaska grow ever more desensitised with the conservative status quo, and their insistence on clinging to a now redundant past.

"You see here, Kruchinkin... Have you seen it? Apparently, the Romanovs will live to the next century... and by God, they have become quite tame and modest. Revolution has shut them down, I presume?"

Vincent Barrault

President of the Monegasque Republic

"One ought to be tame and modest if their ancestors had to run away from home and were reduced from the Imperial Family of All Russias to the sovereign of a frozen tip on North American soils. What of her should be in our interest?"

Andrei Valeryevich Kruchinkin

Shareholder of the Garnet Group, The Order of the Red Night

"I thought you would be happy at the prospect of a surviving Romanov princess, and she is quite a hard-working lady, you see. I see her as a fair leader of her own nation, regardless of size and prestige."

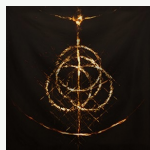

"That is great, but I am not very fascinated yet. I could see her potentials and deep care for her people [something we do not normally have. unless on a good day, mind you]. But still, she still has a lot to work on to meet the great Tsars and Tsarinas to whom I once devoted my life to serving."

Arpent de Neige (Monegasque Republic)

Setting: 1926 (PT/FanT)

After the Monaco Succession Crisis of 1918 ended up with the Grimaldi being exiled from Monaco and the microstate being taken over by pro-French politicians, lobbyists, businessmen, Sicilian mafia and odd string of cultists, the little country on Cote d'Azur now becomes hotbed of excesses and degeneracies that rivals Weimar Republic. Now a gambling table for the struggle of power between multiple factions, in a state where money equals power and vice versa - both in this life and the next. Major influence here.

"Well, I don't only rule the dead. You see the title "King of corpses" or "King of corpse" is more a play on the path to the crown. You need to kill the previous holder, and then in order to protect the throne the bodies often pile up because at any time one can challenge you.

There's many different species in our lands. Undead are only just a minority as in the past we did act as a refuge for those that were willing to accept the way of these lands and more so those that had nowhere to go. But now there's boundaries and requirements.

But that's why I always state that I admire those who have high regard s for rights in their nation. Everyone was undead I wouldn't give a damn. A large percentage of undead has lost sentence. And im not saying that in a cruel sense as they are unique.

And another misconception. While I am considered immortal, I am not undead, I don't hold that trait, I bleed, a can regenerate limbs but re attaching limbs isn't something I can do, unless its prosthetics"-Luden

"So there is something entirely separate from the Government that isn't apparently controlled by it. That's rather interesting as the days of the mafia on Xeria (continent) were systemically eradicated by the time, the Alkdorian Empire was established. There wasn't everything that wasn't in some way, not controlled by the authorities. Domination has been the manifesto of the Alkdorians as long as I drew breath in this rotten world. But that isn't to say that the criminal underground is gone, no, it's just be repurposed to instead serve the interests of the Empire to expand its influence across the globe or what can reach too, that is. As there is no physical endpoint on our "planet" - otherwise I have no qualms about the President. He's a man who sees the world as it is, and just using the tools given to him to ensure that's he's the biggest scum on the block and not that other guy down the street."

What? Of course not, the Minister isn't in charge. He is just a servant carrying out of the Emperor's will. Even if that will is just to serve his personal interests rather than some noble cause. Also please try to add more meat when writing an opinion on one of my characters. I would appreciate that greatly.

"There is certainly much to admire in the premier. A precocious engineer, she was already contributing to her country as only a high schooler, balancing her own education and her service to Cascadia throughout high school and university. Goodness, her sleep schedule was far from healthy, it must be said. And from what I can see, she is a shrewd politician as well, leapfrogging into the national spotlight upon recognizing the popularity she had gained through her GENESIS missiles. And as a premier, my admiration for her continues –continuing providing for universal healthcare and employment, and extending that to housing as well? Her brand of democratic socialism captures many of the Baizouan Marxist Party's goals: the people coming together and through their votes, voices, and representatives steadily yet consistently stepping closer and closer to a Marxist vision for society where each is provided for according to their needs, and each gives according to their ability. An elephant can only be eaten one bite at a time, after all.

"...Nevertheless, I shall confess my admiration is hedged slightly. Perhaps I am speaking from a position of privilege, as I have enjoyed Baizou's longstanding peace, and I am willing to recognize I may be expecting too much, but... I am troubled that so much of Premier Kato's success comes from her contributions to a war machine. And to think she has been designing these weapons since she was fifteen! It gives me some serious reservations about Cascadia—to think it is a republic that asks its children to grow up so quickly and commit so early to a life molded by war. And while I am heartened by Premier Kato's internationalism—certainly a sign of her commitment to the proletarian cause—I am concerned that this international engagement often takes the form of transfers of arms. I hope that she has chosen her recipients wisely, as in my world's history the banner of the proletariat has been sometimes waved by those who do not have the people's best interests in mind.

"But as I said before, perhaps I judge too harshly... I am blessed with an era of peace, and Premier Kato is troubled on every side by belligerent actors and the threat of war. Certainly, I would not want Cascadia or Premier Kato to subject themselves to danger for the sake of an ill-considered pacifism. Perhaps material conditions really do not allow anything less than the stockpile and preparedness Premier Kato brings to bear. I suppose I simply wish it were not so necessary and that Premier Kato had been able to spend her student years more on youthful pleasures and less on military industry and that Premier Kato had been able to vault herself to national leadership for something other than the power of her arms and the payload of her rockets. But I am digressing, dwelling less on Premier Kato herself and more on the conditions of her world.

"At the end of the day, my kindest regards to Premier Kato. May Cascadia prosper, and may her people find both safety and liberty in their greatest senses."

BN: Feel free to choose anyone on the Leaders page.

I paint you as a demagogue with a hawkish personality and an iron fist? Your methods are simply callous and brutal from an outsider's perspective. One truly has to wonder the depths of depravity that the nobility has reached for you to commit such needlessly cruel acts against them. Perhaps they were an entrenched faction, crueler than what my mind could comprehend or perhaps you're a simpleton. A strongman with a vision, with no care for the world about his opponents.

I've never communed with gods or goddesses who wanted total control over reality. Only a mortal upstart would think of such lofty goals. 'Wait. I know him! I love that guy! I mean, who would like Bjorn? A perfect mix of relaxed and serious. Despite his.... hedonistic lifestyle, he has proven himself a fantastic leader in his own special way. I mean no-one is perfect. If nothing else, he makes a fantastic companion.'

"Mmm... another one of those table formats. Poor bastards, bowin' to the Man like that. Gotta buck the trend and use colored text, friend."

-Beeeeeeeeert.

"I don't think you, um... know what bucking a trend is, Bertie."

"Ah, shut up. Go hit something with a wrench.

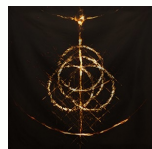

Anyways, uh, I gotta say, anyone who's calling himself 'emperor' ain't the best in my book. Though I think for this guy I can make an exception; from what I can tell you ain't the worst. I mean, I feel like there's something to be said for... well... getting stuff done, you know? Ideally you'd be leavin' your, uh, subjects be, but this ain't an ideal world and as far as I can tell you's playin' one hell of a long game with your life. I mean, I don't even understand it, though I ain't the brightest, I've got to admit. But it's that distinction that's, well, redeeming; positions of power don't do a man any good, but if you've got something you's doing with that power that ain't just self-serving buggery then I can respect that. And sticking with it as long as you have ain't nothing to scoff at at all. Just... maybe don't go gettin' ahead of yourself, yeah? I get that you physically can't, just... wanted to throw that out there. Something about you doesn't sit right, but I... I have seen worse, I guess. Much worse."

If he watches his six of course, there are many fishy folks out there, who wanna see him dead, so much, that this itch gives them murderous mood. Another threat. What if enemy uses one these groups to take him out and create a puppet government, making Low Bloods a satelite?

And he is wanted by Rapture too. But he handles all those threats so far. I'll just sit there, smoke weed and obseve him for longer. And I wonder, what are the horrors, that would strike dear in HIM and prevent Luden from expanding his realm? Something tells me, they would require far more than a warband of road warriors to deal with them "Shawn Bjornson

"It seems some of the lore needs to be expanded on. Or perhaps there was a hiccup in our systems.

I believe I bothered the wrong group during the beginning of my rule. The black hand has been "Dissected" If you will. They were letting wards torture immortals letting the torture hide behind the label "research" Due to the horrors some of us were being forced into. ID rather not go into details on what they did to people.

They abducted me during a civil war, keeping me imprisoned long after the event, saying that I was committing unfair reasons towards the king. They even kept me hidden from the new king, my best friend. Stating that I died during the war. A teenager, imprisoned, longer than any of the recent, king of corpses.

By an organization that rose to such heights during those years. Not all of it was bad, but seeing me break free. It put fear in their eyes. They said many things about me. But I've stated that I've dealt with those that think they can slander my name.

Im not that easy to topple. I will make sure all know that much.

As for rapture. I have no ties with them. I don't even know if its still in the sea.

nd finally. The things that reside outside of our borders. Maybe I'll speak of them.

All strange locations, strange creatures. Ive lost a lot of men to those creatures. In time they will be remembered."-Luden
