power fantasies are inescapable. people may dress them up with language of "promoting freedom" or "fighting slavery" or "defending democracy" but it's all the same at the end of the day, they all just want the guys they like to trample on the guys they don't like.

Well, nobody really wants to be everybody's stepping stool in military threads anyways.

this nation, nicking people's death guns and blowing people up with them in mil threads for shits and giggles:

this sounds like a great opportunity for a money hungry nation to just advertise their weapon wares to other nations, after all, if 20% of your population is in the military, then surely at least 15% of those need some top quality weapons, right? $$$$$$

I can't relate, I never leave F7. Feels nice not to be involved in... a single roleplay, and I can spend that time considering whether I feel like writing factbooks instead.

This can totally work if it's done well. If the "elected" representative "democratic" institutions are quite clearly turned into rubber-stamp bodies as a display of kleptocratic corruption [cough cough], it's good as a plot device. But if they unironically pretend, OOC-ly, that their nation is a democracy while Mary/Gary Sue self-insert does all the heavy lifting, that's what I can't stand.

tbh that's not limited to just one-line rp. it's possible to go "ohoho look how much i know about military tech imma flex how much i can minmax my army to the point of unbeatability" too, and it's got much of the same effect.

The real based military builders are those who have good knowledge of military tech and use that to build a realistic army rather than an unbeatable minmaxed one. I like to think I've made my army fairly realistic and gave them decent equipment, but not the best stuff you can get in MT. The people who try to tech wank in MT don't realize that a lot of the "best" stuff has low production numbers for a wide variety of reasons, and that some of the stuff they think is cool is downright useless in most conflicts.

I'm fairly sure there's also been a male monarch who the creator in question quite ostensibly wished he could, uh, spend time with. I forget the nation, they spammed out a whole load of the same copy-pasted format though.
