Some good things (in my opinion), but not enough to make me want to live there.

The Economy isn't exactly ironed out all the way. But, everybody is equil in terms of being equily poor. also, I can complain about being poor and blame the government about being poor and I wouldn't get shot. So it depends, because if I was moving there, I would hate it, but if I grew up there I would love it.

Your nation isn't bad, and seeing as crime is non-existent I would probably live there, but if it's just to work given the employers and the contracts, I probably would move fairly quickly

Not much to work on (even by my nation's current standards).

I guess I would live there for a short period of time.

It wouldn't be my first choice but I'd live there.

All stats are canon, except for that income tax. Also, my nation is not some weird amusement park made of fried chicken.

I would have some complaints, such as the existence of capital punishment and conscription and WMDs, but I think I would be happy to live there.

Big maybe. Quality of life seems good but as far as I can tell it's based off Japan, so their work culture could be a big negative
