Most likely the Republican Party, since republicanism is its only descriptive word and that literally just means the belief of a democratic state. If it happens to be a fiscally liberal form of republicanism, then I'd probably vote National Conservative, and depending on the National Conservative economic policy, potentially the People's Party.

btw, my nation's political parties are in my factbook.

A cluster of islands located in the East Pacific between the modern-day Ecuadorian Galapagos and Costa Rica. Founded after a libertarian revolution overthrew imperial Spanish control of the islands, and decisive rebel victory. Now a nation effectively worshipped by libertarians and conservative Christians everywhere.

Partido Emancipación de Distrito Central pushes for the foundation of two separate districts to be formed out of Distrito Central; Distrito de la Puebla, representing more centrist areas, including Puebla Arena, and being 43% urban; and Distrito Montañeté, an 87% rural district named for the Montañeté Valley where its largest city is, and being more conservative and libertarian than Distrito de la Puebla. Bill passes district committee 8-3.
