Honestly? Yeah. It's a funny joke (if your sense of humor is terrible enough for that sort of thing) but at the end of the day it's a joke at your own expense.

Look... we are going off-topics here.

Also, I'm probably a hypocrite on this, but there seem to be a fair bunch of people making Q&A and then just disappear without a trace days later. I cannot blame them for their inactivity but it is happening here and there like it's a curse.

I think my Q&A finally ran out of steam. I might try and revive it in like a couple days or so if there's no new activity.

There are so many hypothetical scenario threads in NSG. I just see them pop up and go Grrrr!!!tm, but I think that trend is petering out.

Same here, mine's been dead for a pretty long while and it's been hard trying to revive it with all the course work I've been getting. ~~It also doesn't help that the questions I'm due to answer are really hard, dangit Bloodshade.~~ Then again, I suppose it's better to be stuck on some difficult yet interesting questions than to have page after page of "what do you think of [X thing within my canon]?", which might be another cliché worth bringing up.

Is this me? All I'd ever asked in Q&A threads is "What do you think of Feyrisshire and USSR Catgirls and Magical Girls" but that's because I'm imitating another meme.

Also, another well-known cliché is that sometimes I feel that I check almost a lot of the clichés people talk about here. And then someone crosses your name and puts in "zalgo" as if me as a regular frequenter of F7 wouldn't notice...

Bloodshade tends to do that. I'm glad to know that I managed to give 'em just as tough a question in my reply to that thread 😊
I'll try to think of something to ask in yours as well, I suppose, it'd be a shame for such a good Q&A to die. Especially when mine was just given a new lease on life.

I personally don't mind the "what do you think of" questions, just because they help to keep Q&As alive by acting as /bumps, but I can see how others would find them irritating. They do get old when the nations asking have the same "generic MT democracy" lore over and over again.

I have answered the "what do you think" questions for almost a hundred times (I think, I never count). I guess they aren't the end of the world for me but sometimes the subjects presented are not exactly interesting.

I basically don't answer 'what do you think of my nation' questions in either of my (admittedly dead) Q&A threads because the point of Q&A threads, to me, is for people to ask questions and learn more about the nation that is the topic of the thread, not what their views on other nations are.

(And then there's also the fact that both Aikoland and Gandoor canonically exist on RL Earth [well Gandoor's TL is always five years ahead of RL] so none of the NS nations actually exist in either canon so I can't exactly give an opinion on your nation if it doesn't exist in our own canon whatsoever. I'm fine with fudging that a bit when it comes to stuff like embassies, storefronts, etc, but nothing that directly effects any of my own canons.)

Nope, but you do know the person behind this nation. 😊

There seems to be a sudden rash of "If this factbook/dispatch/meme vid gets n upvotes I'll change my flag to a meme/pizza/finger flipping the bird". Those existed before now but the trend seems to be picking up steam greatly.
