Feodor's Status: Somewhere,
in Kamchatka

It appears that His Excellency has written his personal opinion on a napkin regarding the individual named "Shawn Bjornson". And like the napkin he wrote on regarding "Nova", his messy handwriting is so dang small that it's impossible to read it, and the fact that it is written in Russian is all the worse...

"I'd call him an animal if he did not actually act like one. And...he is some enthusiast for anarchism? Good God...how low can he go with his ideas of freedom and flooding the world in an ocean of spirits. When I hear about his campaigns, I think he is ending the world slowly with his ideals. Laws and order exist for a reason in a country: to prevent anarchy from destroying society. So much for his ideas of the so-called "freedom" he espouses when everything will fall apart, the stupid man..."

-His Excellency the President of the Kamchatka Republic, Feodor Vladimirov, his opinion on Shawn Bjornson written on a napkin; and he takes a sip of his dark roasted coffee. It's cold and he spits it up.

Flavor Story

"You are French like me huh? Jean-Andou Flaubert... I've heard things about you, how you are Le Patron's favorite little pet as he keeps feeding you delusions of Futurist grandeur. You've served France but I have no attachment to the old country any more after what they've done to me. After what it have done to you as well. As for Le Patron? I serve him... for a price and never brought into his mumbo-jumbo ideology. He offers freedom yes but that freedom is too chaotic for my tastes. Also, you were there when the Germans invaded France, yes? I was too young to remember but I remember when my father joined the Vichy regime because he thought it was the only way to preserve France. Thinking mutineers like you... are dumb in trying to change the world by their own hands. But look at us, we are two successful people who've made a living for ourselves.

However, we made meaning and carved a purpose in our life with our two hands. I'm sorry for your family but that's little excuse to enact Futurist terror on your own people. I rose above being a killer for the state and a cold-blood mercenary to become a... international Robin Hood. When all is said and done, I fought for someone's dream. A good dream that I came to call my own. Not this twisted future you're fighting in Accelerationism. You don't view yourself as a human, don't you? Just some visionary or meretric concept or a force of change. Slaving away your entire life for this idea without looking at the good things in life. A dangerous line of thinking that would only spell disaster for the self and others."

...

"And To fight against reality itself... that is surely the idiotic thing to do."

The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA

Triomphe du Surréalisme (1968)

- There are many things said about Patagonia but few actually know what goes on behind the Andes mountains. Tales of human depravation and man's inner darkest self run wild. A place where avant-garde culture flourish and the artist don't fear the censor. Where all live bold and free under the gaze of the Patron. Yet all dreams will come to an end soon...

Something about how there is no difference between what we perceive as civilized, and what we perceived as savage. If you break someone, unfortunately, that civilized man is going to be savage no matter the background. A good story all around, shows that we are still people underneath regardless of classifications. Anyway, that aside, I am here to, ah, evaluate about you, it would seem. The Big Boss is your name, I have heard. War is a business is something I and the other Valentians cannot get behind, but given your situation, it seems that's your only choice. Plus, you are doing quite a good job at it, anyway, truth be told. No, not the killing. I would never praise wanton killing, you know that. I mean that it's good that you are at least taking child soldiers and trying them to be more... proper. It seems to one of the only ways, I know. I mean, a young underaged cadet doesn't mean they are in a war; they are simply taken care of and will not be doing any fighting. At least, I assume that is what you are doing. Quite a success story, and I am intrigued by it, overall. There is little to no scientific consensus to discuss and talk about, but at the end of it all, I am glad that you found your humility, Colonel. For that, you definitely deserve a praise, and perhaps a break from two from your daily routines.

Russian Security Council

Ataman Stepanov's thoughts on Foresittend Marcus Alan Ariel Maximilian "Unendlichkeit Jäger" Swifty Felix Maverick Prometheus Revlin Lynx Artyom Lichtenstein Baptiste C. Talon Haydn Lincoln Taal Reynolds Fang Wu Ying

The individual in question really has got a mouthful word, haven't they? One of the first things which can be noticed is their absurd height - their pre-Valentinian height already puts up them way above average, but the Valentinian one is just a three centimeters away from the tallest man in the world - their name was Robert Wadlow or something like that. One would obviously also be concerned if Reynolds has any health problems related to such height, as there is a higher risk of cancer and more blood clots. Their fight armor is nothing like our world has seen yet in real life, and which would only appear in a sci-fi book. Either way, we must look way past those superficial things.

His scientific background and participation in politics reminds of Andrey Sakharov - a nuclear physicist who led the Modernist salon in Tomsk. Now, unlike Sakharov, Reynolds seems to be way less elitist and focus on people's personal prosperity, despite still channeling funds for scientific grade projects (which is absolutely fine). Reynolds also has the correct opinion when it comes to welfare and personal freedoms, as it is generally a waste of time and resources to police what citizens do with their personal lives if it doesn't cause political damage. That said, there is a disagreement between the two sides when it comes to religion - Stepanov thinks that religions are the opiates of the people, thus their practice should be clamped down as much as possible. And it seems that he got his armor in the first place from a specimen which was from an entirely different universe - things just became a lot more confusing there, along with the usage of worms for armor, even if there is likely a good reason behind that.

Stepanov decided to take a look at their stats and try to evaluate - at least this time it didn't require one of the number guys to explain in a language for average Free Territory's citizen. Reynolds HP, damage and firing rate per second look pretty absurdly impressive at glance, but judging by the fact that pretty much everyone in Valentinian world has way higher stats than humans on Earth, it would be a stretch to call Reynolds as the strongest person which Valentinians can muster. Reynolds usage of melee attacks and shield would be incredibly archaic if those functioned like regular swords and shields, but apparently his style of fighting still does a good job for him when considering the damage rates. For most other stats there is nothing much else to do than nod in understanding.

Overall, Reynolds seems like a pretty apolitical, yet powerful being which should not be taken lightly. Even if he is not a fighter in his personal life, with those abilities of his he could probably be used as a killing machine by a more... sinister government, and he is lucky that Valentinians have already unified the Earth and are relatively peaceful, instead of sending the super soldiers to claim more lands and spill blood in process. To sum it up, Stepanov's thoughts on Reynolds are indifferent-cordial, because both sides can interact with each other only through the multiverse warps.

Well,
Stepanov...
if
I'm
being honest
here,
he doesn't look
or sound
any different
from
any other Soviet-
era
army
general.
He
seems

President John Adam Ross

alright
enough, I
don't see anything particularly strange
or
different
about
him...
yeah,
he
may lead
the RFT,
but
the Soviet
generals were already practically leading the nation
anyway,
so
that's no
different...
I
mean,
he
was a
soldier,
and I
respect
him
for that.
I'm
not wholly sure how
he went
from
being
just
sergeant major
with
fourth
grade
education
that's probably long evaporated
by now
to becoming

general
and leader
an entire...
nation?
Territory?
Whatever
the
hell
this place
is considered.

do
support
most of his political
and ideological
stances.
Even
if
they differ somewhat in execution, I'd
say
our ideas aren't too
different
each
other.
Granted,
I'm
not
an anarchist...
but
he isn't
either,
is
he?
calls
himself
an
anarchist
but actually
runs
dictatorship...
hold
on,
let me
jot
some

notes
down...
so
yeah,
like
saying,
he gets it.
You've
got
to
say
some
hypocritical things
to
get people
on your side.
For
reason,
though,
think
that's
"unheard
of,"
or
"lying,"
but
mean,
come
on!
you didn't recognize
that
the Russian
Free
Territory
wasn't
an
anarchist
paradise,
then you're
imperceptive
to
be compensated.
As
if
it
wasn't
evident
with
big government
and
huge

military
and...
bunch
of
other
stuff
that's very clearly
not anarchistic?

Oh,
and
one
his
controversies
is
that
he looted
enemy
cities
and
military
bases during
the war?
That's
a
controversy,
that's
called
"being
smart."
People
acting
like
the enemy's going
to complain
about having their shit
stolen
all
the
time.
Okay, they're
not
going
to need
any
these gold
bars
and diamonds
where they're
going,
Harold.

Might
well
put them
to good
use.
And
besides,
if
you
don't take
them,
someone
else
will,
so
you
as
well
help yourself
to
the spoils
while there's still loot
to
go around.

Overall...
I'd
say
him.

I will give him the Globalism bit, that's for sure, but as for why I don't like him? Look at him. A person who gets off on torture, wants people shot for stepping out of line, and basically someone who will thwart his competition in the most violent way. Needless to say, I am not a fan of him. With that said, I suppose for the sake of neutrality, I should try talking to him. I don't know, maybe this might be the beginning of something wonderful, even though I have countless amount of doubts. As I said before, "seem to have", so I am willing to give him a chance, perhaps.

OOC: I am sure, ya' deserve better answer, so here ya' go.

"What he doesn't understand and never will, is that we put our moral values above profit, for our common ideology is what unites all our factions. We stood and stand united thanks to honor code and mutual aid. And money... it's just a resource. Helpful, important, but still... a resource. The ones like him have exploited and bled us dry for more than twenty years, until we revolted and striked back, and now, our people hone their combat and survival skills, so no exploiter shall torment them and their families. But... in in some way, he was right to criticize us about not profiting enough off someone. Yes indeed, we should be raiding more exploiters, tyrants and slavers and pillage them more thoroughly.

I guess ol' Slick is somewhat helpful, for he reminds us, why we must stay true to our principals and fight with passion."-Shawn Bjornson

AN: "The heck he is talkin" about? Sounds like some gibberish. Maybe he should get some sleep, calm down and make a statement, when he is in the right state of mind."-Shawn Bjornson.

And yes, while technology might not all remove problems, it can remove most of them and drastically increase quality of life and thus make the remaining problems easier to solve. But I wonder, how the hell does he manage to ensure, that economy doesn't suffocate under all those taxes? Ataman Stepanov's thoughts on The Diplomatic Artificial Intelligence

It seems that we have encountered a network of leaders which is made up from several AIs, which are each responsible for their own field. It seems that Zeloria knows very well about sharing the work. The network was created after a different AI attempted to coup the government - that one hit a bit too close to home. If anything, what would have happened if the G.A.I would have stayed in power? Either way, those kinds of imaginary scenarios would be fruitless - right now there are 8 AIs which excel in their specialty field, but are pretty mediocre at everything else. That said, in this particular situation the diplomatic AI is speaking, so this is the one which will be evaluated.

Honestly, there is not that much to evaluate on the Diplomatic AI - yes, it travels across because diplomatic relations is one of its tasks, and them having so many friends is not that surprising anymore when their job is to basically go around and meet various people. As for their political views... well, some of those are pretty much the common sense - there are few people who genuinely enjoy war, throwing nuclear weapons and other WMDs, and most people would rather live in harmony. Thing is, that peace not always is possible and sometimes the nasty option is the only way. That said, the question of how this and other 7 AIs can be sentient (and thus be AIs in the first place) is a more puzzling matter, as it seems like something straight out of a science fiction. Robots and machines having emotions? The most what cybernetics experts within the Black Army have promised are robots which are programmed to do certain tasks and are suited for routine works, such as on factory assembly lines. Overall, some of those AIs can be weird at times (sometimes even bordering on the level of immaturity), but they seem to be quite harmless and not actively malevolent. In fact, the military AI perhaps could have an interesting conversation or two with some of our generals.

Opinion is neutral until further notice.

"Stepanov-han, It's unfortunate that your people lost the Great Patriotic War in the timeline you live in, especially to a group of petulant destroyers of culture that think blond hair and blue eyes somehow makes them special or them being descended from some imaginary solar mommy; many compatriots of mine would blame your people for not defending themselves adequately and not being fit enough despite your lands natural resources and demographic superiority, but, I am not in your position so I cannot judge. My my calculations, 1942 would've been the decisive date for the Germans to act but I really need to touch up with the Europe Observation staff people's registries.

Now on the present: I approve of your decision to let people live out their private lives; your efforts should be ideally placed to reclaiming lost territories and building up your institutional and infrastructural strength for that Crusade. A sense of cohesion among citizens is needed, as it is between any unit working in a task, but squeezing to hard can be real counterproductive, eh, especially considering the unsophisticated means of social engineering at hand, but hey, we all have to work with what we have. Also, normally I'd be against nuclear weapons existing, but considering that your enemies are a few sandwiches short of a picnic, I can't really find anything worse than not having any deterrence at all. Just make sure that sunrise in a can ideally stays sealed up as a last resort.

"I hear about this Stepanov that he also wants to reunite Russia and her people and restore the nation to its prime, empowering the people with a sense of national pride again. And also he is a military commander like myself with lofty views and goals in mind. He is respectable as a military leader...but not a politician. Anarchism? Platformism? I can write those political theories off as nonsensical and him an opportunist who claims to be "socially progressive" pushing for...LGBTQ acceptance? What is that, another obscure movement I have not yet heard of? Never mind I'll look up this LGBTQ acceptance when I am done. Like I said before: Stepanov as a military leader he receives respect, but unlikely to be respected for being an apologist for a Russia under anarchism..."

"And the alien the Americans have employed into their ranks. My first impression on Nova was me calling her a stranger from the stars, someone who cannot be quick to trust. Seems she was quick to learn and understand the history of a 'primitive' species on this unassuming planet she currently resides on, including our primordial fears towards someone or something from the stars. I think I can tolerate her existence in a way, maybe it is because she looks and acts like any other person I've come across. Still, the Americans with her would be wise to keep monitoring her since she is, well, an alien they have assigned as a chief of one of their groups."

Hello there, haha! I am Clarissa, your neighborhood friendly Android! There is quite a lot of mention about you being opportunistic, but I like to think that it was just you trying to seize the opportunity in every well. After all, it's not very nice to be an opportunistic when people around you could use the same thing more than you do! That is the way the world should live, and to keep on giving to everyone, hm hm! Ahh, where are my manners? I am not here simply to preach about the love and joy! We are all fit to live the way we like, but I do like it when we are all happier in this world thanks to positivity. You have quite a good outlook on life - hopeful of what might bring you ahead, and the like. I wish you all the best and hey, you look nice in that uniform! It's quite an adorable fit, I must say! I do hope we will meet each other again, you know? It's nice to share the happiness!

"I've always wondered what form our grand nation might take if it were in another world. And for some reason, in their world we've decided to ally with the...Swedish? Why the Swedish? Couldn't we do something with the French, or the Finnish, or even the stupid Russians? Wait, you're a Russian? How surprising, to see a Russian who isn't some oligarch or serf for once. Well, at least you've managed to keep the Americans under control, thankfully. Perhaps they'll be civilised in another 1000 years.

Your policies do not give me much to work with, except your profile shows your participation in some Oriental war and fondness for the monarchy. If I could, I'd remind you of the consequences of invading other nations for your own gain, but you'd just ignore me."

"Ah, I don't believe we've ever met before, even though your appearance is really familiar for some reason. I am surprised to know that you were created as an emulation of humanity...how has the technology in your world progressed so quickly? Does this lend credence to the theory that there are in fact a multitude of universes somewhere, created by the Great Goddess herself?"

I digress, however. I must say reading your story does bring up quite the multitude of emotions, given your experiences and history. I for one would not fancy being indoctrinated in any capacity! Though I don't quite understand all of the worktool language from your biography, I can feel that your life has been more human than I expected, and your care for those you chersih genuine."
