- Oswald I -

"I can't really put much to Oswald. it seems like there is nothing on his environmental policies, which is one of the biggest factors when i try to give an opinion on someone. Still, he carries his weight around as expected of someone who call himself an emperor, though he has a tendency to rather abrasive towards others despite being given peaceful intentions, which is a shame. It is nice to see that he provides social welfare to his less fortunate people. it is also good that he has a positive stance on racial equality as well. His religion is not compatible with ours, but i am more than aware, and understanding that other societies have different beliefs, just as long as they are not pushed onto us. Maybe we could reach some level of positive relations, but it would be down to whether or not he respects the natural world..."

Huh, it seems that the emperor made his own air conditioner during a hot week - it seems that he has some skills with mechanics. As for his support of desegregation, I am more conflicted there, as while I should support such a move as a part of pan-human doctrine, I still don't exactly like those in the colonies, considering that in our timeline they often disrupted supply lines and waged partisan warfare in disputed zone. While he is a monarch, he seems to be a pretty resourceful one, and who actually rules country to an extent.

Francis Ferdinand? I think that I recognize that name! Wasn't he the guy which was murdered by a Serbian nationalist named Gavrilo Princip? Yeah, his early marriage would be even more of a controversy nowadays, because I don't think that a 16 year old should marry, even if it is more of a political marriage. That said, while death of his parents came unexpected, it seems that he was made to inherit a conflict and properly respond to this, considering how quickly he realized what he had to do, and wasn't lax about it as well.

Him being a militarist in personality is nothing surprising - he is also a commander-in-chief of the Imperial army, and he is not someone who takes war very lightly. At least he doesn't spend his country's funds and resources on those wunderwaffe like nazis did - oversized, grand projects, yet useless in practice, and the resources could have gone for more basic tanks instead. He at least is honest with his conservatism, and him being pro-racial equality would place him as somewhat progressive even for modern day, but in his time and context I can imagine that it would definitely draw attention. He also seems to be a loving husband, while also acknowledging the differences, and not being an abusive drunkard.

I understand his hatred towards socialism and communists, despite our disagreements on that matter. I guess that it is also because we come from different settings, and I could actually manage to put commies in government without backfiring. At least he has got a welfare system to calm the workers down, and not laissez-faire claptrap which would accelerate discontent. He seems to be quite religious and conservative as well, which is good - traditions should be maintained. Also, him being an "old soul" is not that bad at all, considering that he acts more mature than a typical man of his age would. Perhaps it means that his empire still has hope to keep both ancaps and "libertarian" socialists at bay.

An archdruid? I admit that I haven't seen such a title yet, although SC's Irish might be more familiar with it. With her height she could fit well in the Valentinian society, and it seems that she loves wildlife, is pacifistic, and just like the real druids, has contact to nature in one way or another. Now let's get to juicy stuff - politics.

I can't say I like her social opinions too much, because they reek too much of individualism. The belief of "nature alone choosing who leads" for me is something from hippie books at best, or endorsement of luddites at worst, but I guess that her perception was shaped by her society and country, and she wouldn't understand our system fully too. She is right on capitalists and corporations being exploiters of nature, but I disagree with her on matters of currency. At least she is religious, but it gets complicated when it comes to science - sure, I like alchemy too, but I would rather use the opportunities of other science as well. Overall, while well meaning in some fields, her pacifism is one of the things which irritates me the most.

Ah yes, the confederates - secessionist bane of United States and Megastates, but this time with additional libright and minarchist package. I am not sure what kind of mulatto Pickett sees in you because for me you look white as hell, and I am sure that our Pan-Africanist governors would confirm the same. It is good that she is an advocate for nuclear energy, as in my opinion it draws line between pro-science and anti-scientific BS camp, but the fact that it was after a fuckin' documentary indeed tells something.

Someone born in the early 2000s? Those people now are starting to become serious participants in our political system. Anyways, it is even more baffling that she was born as Californian, yet absorbed the culture of South so easily when she moved to what is the former Tennessee. At least her being interested in politics shows that the young generation wasn't fully lost. That said, her supporting the abolition of NSA and FBI is not something I would agree on, as I would rather merge them just as I did. Also, whistleblower good can depend on situation, but in most of the cases they are an obstacle to the government and its affiliates.

She had a career in navy as well? Huh, that's interesting and at least she has a bit experience militarily. The fact that she joined the Nuclear Propulsion candidate program out of all available options means that she probably received a good opportunity. She seems to have served in both armies, and she won in the state elections, I give her that.

I guess that to an extent I could be called "pro-state's rights" too, although I more like the Qing tributary system than what she would call "state's rights". Calling the too democratic Lincoln's administration as "dictatorship with time limit", being a fan of laissez-faire and gun rights shows that she, or rather the whole south is off the deep end in this timeline. Letting diplomats to handle the outsider affairs while you focus on internal ones? Clever, very clever I say. As for her religious views, agnostics are the worst - at least atheists openly reject the teachings of god and are easier to spot. Her disparaging Quran and supporting Cultural Christianity is a common, yet unfortunate action - both of them are from the same Abrahamic branch, and as a heavily religious robot, I find no issue with fundamentalists of both sides.

lieb Vaterland, magst ruhig sein,
Fest steht und treu die Wacht, die Wacht am Rhein!
Fest steht und treu die Wacht, die Wacht am Rhein!

- An excerpt of the chorus from 'Die Wacht am Rhein' (also comes in Japanese)

Oswald's Mood: Antagonistic

"Konrad ordering orphans to murder each other, while the adults stand idly by as they throw their wherewithal, just to mold those who survive into the ideal 'neuer Mann' is more than just evidence of his abject insanity; the constitution of Surrealist Patagonien is the paradigm of total moral corruption—this entails doom for the region much like a ship carrying insensible passengers as the captain in the cabin steers his vessel straight into an iceberg, and the ship still sinking down into the deep, dark depths of the abyss."

"This is only made worse with his visit to Nordkorea—the leaders sharing each other's ideologies; the man they call 'Kim Il-sung' adopting Konrad's futurist thinking and Konrad adopting this so-called 'Juche-Ideologie'. Even now that one trip alone was enough for both leaders to begin gravitating towards insanity...it will certainly be one event that will be written in the blood of countless innocents, filling the blank pages of the history books."

"The situation in the Patagonien Region will be accounted for in the history texts, an example of anarchism taken too far by the philosophical ramblings of just one man who wishes to expand his philosophies abroad. Sadly, these teachings have already claimed lives directly and indirectly."

AN:

"He lacks soundness, having a laissez-faire constitution is not a leader with soundness in his thoughts. Perhaps he adopted this because he allowed a coup to take place knowing the perpetrators who openly support him will make him president. Tch...Extimia's government is led by a lazy coward who cannot fair better in democratic elections, and rather, was appointed by armed cowards."

-His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Imperial Fatherland, Oswald

Kyrovad entered the political landscape in 1994 when he ran against opposition leader Verrar Derius. Kyrovad was defeated on the elections by a margin of 28%. Kyrovad counted with the support of the remaining high class of Extimia wich included powerful magnates and army officers.

Since Das Kaiserliche Vaterland has blocked and skipped me. I shall be doing Extimia.

To be honest, he is an incredible businessman, however, I several dislike his approach on the welfare matter. The poor will end up poorer with the rich gaining more and more due to this society.
