The Commonwealth of New Valhalla has been a chief arms producer since the start of WWI. Currently, it finds itself fighting New Mercia, over a daim they call "Providence" and say it's theirs. This war has seen the first use of droid units deployed in combat in the history of warfare.

Their most important trade center on the American side of the Atlantic is called Dugubelebelebakŏ, and rests at the mouth of the Amazon river, which I am surprised is not named something else that would require a separate pronunciation guide, proficiency in making glottal clicks, and an on-board tongue-twister algorithm.

The territory controlled by the United Malian Provinces includes all of West Africa except for Algeria, Mauritania, Morocco (+Eastern Sahara), Ivory Coast and the Free Coast (Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Sierra Leone and Liberia). I'm assuming this is a "Mali Empire colonized South America after exploring the Amazon that one time" thing.

Understanding that the factbooks remain a work in progress, I have learnt that while New Spiedska's history goes back far, even having been colonised by two separate powers, its impact on the global community had only been prominent in recent history, where it has assisted America (a very close ally i presume!) in the Manhattan Project and followed America to the moon.

I could envision an interesting mix of Dutch and English culture in New Spiedska as well

Emperor Maharlika is known as the Seventh Republic of the Phillipines. Presumably, it replaced the sixth republic, which was an autocratic dictatorship. The Seventh Republic is a great economic and militaristic power in the region, unlike previous versions of the country.

Khugon controls parts of northern Bessarabia, Hungary, Slovakia and Transylvania. As a kingdom, it has existed ever since the Christianization of the KKhugori Khanate in 1175... I'm assuming they're Turkic or Central Asian in origin, because that name does not sound European at all.

After the destruction of New Malmø caused a loss of contact with Europe, the Norse colonies near Hjartfjord suffered a steep decline before stabilising in the latter half of the 13th century AD.
